PRESIDENT IS USING PROBE

Taft Makes Diligent Hunt for Letter in Controller Bay Affair.

CHARLES P. TAFT'S NAME IS INVOLVED

Committee Investigating a Charge That His Pull Was Employed.

Washington, July 10.—Secretary Fisher today told President Taft that a careful search of the interior department records failed to show the "Dick to Dick" letter in which it was alleged that C. P. Taft used his influence in behalf of navigation interests in Alaska to secure control of Controller Bay.

Secretary Fisher also told the president that he saw the article written by Miss Abbott before it was printed and remembered no such letter in the article.

Dennett and Abbott Subpoenaed

Commissioner Fred S. Dennett, of the general land office, and Miss M. A. Abbott, a writer, both subpoenaed as witnesses, were present today when the house committee on expenditures in the interior department began inquiry into charges of an alleged "grab" of valuable water front lands on Controller Bay, Alaska, by the Guggenheim interests.

Published charges have been made that Richard S. Ryan, of New York, said to be a secret agent of the Guggenheim syndicate, wrote to former Secretary Ballinger, declaring that he (Ryan) had asked Charles P. Taft to speak to his brother, President Taft, about the Controller Bay claims and that following this the president "made no further objection to my claim." The land is said to have been wanted as a terminus for railroads from the Guggenheim mine properties.

President Starts Inquiry.

Commissioner Dennett was summoned to tell what he knew of an order by the president throwing the land open to entry. Miss Abbott claimed to have made a copy of the alleged letter from Ryan to Ballinger.

Immediately following his return to Washington today President Taft set his office force to work to investigate the Controller Bay affair. All four of the departments interested were required to make investigations and report any information that might be found. The Controller Bay and Charles P. Taft letterfiles were searched for a letter to the president from his brother in regard to the matter, the report that such a letter had been written having been brought to the president's attention for the first time this morning.

Search Ordered in Cincinnati.

A telegram has been sent to Charles P. Taft's secretary at Cincinnati asking that an inquiry for such letter be instituted there. Mr. Taft said that he had never discussed R. S. Ryan or Controller Bay with his brother and had received no letters so far as he could remember.

It is explained that R. S. Ryan, representing the Controller Bay Navigation company, secured a frontage of eighty rods on Controller Bay. The government retained every other eighty rods of the water front on the bay, making the department officials declare a monopoly impossible. At the white house it was said that there had been no secrecy or anything unusual in the order opening Controller Bay to entry. The matter was passed upon by the cabinet in regular form, it was stated.

No Record of It.

It was stated at the white house today that after a careful search the files in the executive offices failed to reveal any record of a letter to the president from Charles P. Taft concerning Ryan or bearing in any way upon the Controller Bay affair.

The most important development of the investigation of the case by the house committee in the interior department today was the testimony of Commissioner Dennett, of the general land office, that the claimants represented by Richard S. Ryan, of New York, said to represent the Guggenheim interests, had benefited by the omission of one provision in the final official papers.

NO LETTER IN C. P. TAFT'S OFFICE.

Cincinnati, July 10.—At the request of President Taft the letter files of his brother, Charles P. Taft, were searched here today for trace of possible correspondence with the president, Richard Ryan or other persons regarding Controller Bay affairs or Alaskan lands. No letter bearing upon the subject in the remotest degree was found, and so far as the files in Mr. Taft's office show, he has had no correspondence with Mr. Ryan.

Mr. Taft is in Europe now.

CONDITION IS SERIOUS.

Thomas Golden Found Unconscious in an Alley This Morning.

Thomas Golden, aged about 50 years, of 1512 Wells street, was found lying in an alley in the 1600 block off Wells street in an unconscious condition shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. He was removed to police headquarters in the patrol, where he was attended by Dr. M. W. Tinkham, who pronounced him to be suffering from the combined effects of the heat and drink. He was taken from the police station to St. Joseph's hospital, and it was stated this afternoon that the chance of his recovery was doubtful. Golden was overcome by the heat a week ago. He had not fully recovered when stricken this morning.

RECIPROCITY BILL IS SAFE

Will Pass as Soon as the Talking is Finished Says Penrose.

SESSION TO END BY 5TH OF AUGUST

With Canadian Measure in Safe Place Other Bills Will Be Hurried.

Washington, July 10.—"Nothing but speeches stand in the way of the complete success of the Canadian reciprocity bill and we are working the speeches off as fast as possible," said Chairman Penrose of the senate finance committee today. "We shall not be here so much longer. I am sticking to a prediction that we shall adjourn either on Saturday, July 29 or Saturday, Aug. 5, by which time we shall have voted upon and passed the reciprocity bill and voted upon the free list and wool bills."

Senator Simmons of North Carolina opened today's debate on the reciprocity measure. Votes on the Cummins and Simmons amendments enlarging the list of Canadian products to be admitted free will be taken late today and unquestionably they will be defeated.

The business before the senate when it met was the vote on Senator Cummins' free flour amendment, but according to previous agreement the right of way was given to Senator Simmons for his promised speech against reciprocity. He contended that even with the reductions upon Canadian manufactured products given in the agreement the manufacturing industries of the United States would be still more adequately protected.

The house was not in session.

HEAT WAVE COMES BACK.

New York Again Suffering From Deadly Temperature.

New York, July 10.—An unterrified heat wave that showed no consciousness of having been broken last week, returned with the sunrise this morning to claim renewed dominion over the city and its exhausted millions. Two deaths occurred during the night. The tremendous demand for milk and ice has made both scarce and prices have risen. At noon the temperature was 94.

ARBITRATION TREATY URGED.

Honolulu, July 10.—Great Britain and the United States were petitioned to confirm the proposed arbitration treaty between the two countries in a resolution adopted at mass meetings of the British and American residents of Hawaii held at churches throughout the islands Saturday night.

MORE IMPORTANT THAN SHOOTING

SEEKING THE THIEF

New York, July 10.—The police, aided by the defendants, redoubled their efforts today to solve the mystery of the lost letters in the Stokes shooting case. Tomorrow the court will receive the last evidence to show whether or not Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad should be held for the grand jury on the charge of trying to murder W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotel man, and without these letters, the young women say, their cause is badly handicapped. They admit that they shot Stokes, but declare that the circumstances which these letters should help reveal, were such as to make the shooting justifiable.

Police Investigation.

The superintendent of the apartment house where the shooting occurred, was summoned before Police Commissioner Waldo today. The commissioner is interested in the case on account of charges that some of his men permitted Stokes' private detective to ransack Miss Graham's suite and carry away the bundle of letters while the city detectives were present. The defendants say that the letters already made public in connection with the case were returned after nine or more which Stokes wished to suppress had been taken from the collection.

The defendants' lawyers have threatened to bring charges against the Stokes detective, who admitted on the stand that he had carried away the letters. Whether the charge would be larceny or the suppression of evidence, they have not decided.

Will Decide on Course.

Magistrate Freschi, who has been conducing the preliminary hearings in the case and District Attorney Whiteman will confer today with a view to deciding what action ought to be taken about the disappearance of the letters.

At the close of the examination tomorrow the magistrate probably will issue a summons for James Cummings Stokes' private house detective. Formal proceedings will then begin to determine whether or not a crime has been committed.

BLUE AND GRAY WILL CLASP HANDS ON BULL RUN BATTLEFIELD.

SOME OF THE LEADERS IN THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN.

WHEN the veterans of the Blue and the Gray meet in joint reunion on the battlefield of Bull Run this month there will be a scene that will cause every spectator's throat to tighten and his eyes to dim with tears.

Veterans of both sides will form in two lines—sadly depleted since the famous battle of fifty years ago—on the Henry Hill at noon on July 21 and slowly march toward each other. As the two lines come together, in marked contrast with the meeting half a century ago, each old soldier will grasp the hand of the man in the opposite line and extend a handclasp, more eloquent than words, of mutual admiration and regard.

The celebration has been named the Manassas National Jubilee. It will be in commemoration of the first great battle of the civil war. It will last from July 10 to 21, and will culminate with an address by President Taft.

CHURUBUSCO HAS A $10,000 BLAZE

Grawcock Department Store Falls a Prey to the Flames.

ORIGIN IS UNKNOWN

[Special to The Sentinel.]

Churubusco, Ind., July 10.—The J. B. Grawcock department store in this place was almost totally destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning, entailing a loss that will be somewhere between $8,000 and $10,000. The loss is said to be covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The Grawcock store occupied a two-story brick building between the fire department engine house and the F. M. Sonday furniture and undertaking establishment, and the blaze was discovered by Mr. Sonday at 3:40 o'clock this morning. He had been awakened by a noise which he took to be somebody attempting to get into his house, and hastily stepped from his residence through a connecting door into his store.

Examination at the front of the building disclosed nothing wrong, but as he stepped back he distinctly heard the crackling of the flames in the Grawcock store adjoining and smelled the smoke. Reaching the rear Mr. Sonday found the neighboring store ablaze and he ran to the engine house and turned in an alarm.

After a fight of little more than an hour the firemen, working with a hand engine and with lines of hose laid from the fire plugs, had the flames under control. That part of the stock which escaped the fire was heavily damaged by smoke and water, so that the loss will be practically total. The establishment carried a general line of dry goods, groceries and boots and shoes. Mr. Grawcock purchased it from Arthur Brothers less than a year ago. The building is owned by Edward Flanagan, and the damage on the structure will be about $800.

ON A FRIENDLY FOOTING.

Negotiations as to Morocco Proceed But No News is Given Out.

Berlin, July 10.—Preliminary negotiations regarding Morocco are being conducted confidentially, but nothing is made public officially beyond the joint statement that the exchanges are on a friendly footing, that it is expected they will be prolonged and are wrought with sensational developments.

For the first stage, at least, the negotiations are confined to Germany and France, though the other interested powers are kept informed.

TROLLEY TRAIN DERAILED.

St. Louis, July 10.—Train No. 92 on the Illinois traction system which left here last night at 11:45 o'clock for Springfield, Ill., was partly derailed at Hamel, Ill., early today. The motor and day coach, which is used as ballast, were thrown on their sides, but the sleeper remained upright. The motorman, according to reports received here, was the only person injured. He was bruised. Spreading rails caused the derailment.

PRESIDENT BACK FROM SEA TRIP

Mayflower With Guests of Mr. Taft Arrives in Washington.

NO ONE WAS SEASICK

Washington, July 10.—The president's yacht, Mayflower, with the president and his party of guests, including senators and others aboard, arrived at the navy yard this morning at 7 o'clock, after two days' cruise that began from Philadelphia.

Beautiful weather prevailed during the entire trip, fortunately for Senators Taylor and Brown, who were taking their first voyage on the open sea. The other members of the party were very solicitous for the comforts of the "lubbers," but the latter did not have an unpleasant moment.

The president and his guests left politics and the cares of state behind and gave themselves over to thorough enjoyment of salt breezes.

THREE LIVES LOST WHEN SHIP SINKS

CRASH COMES IN FOG

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., July 10.—Three lives were lost and thirty-one people, including six women and a little boy, experienced a thrilling midnight rescue when the steamer John Mitchell of Chicago was sunk early today in collision with the steamer Wm. H. Mack of Cleveland, off Vermillion Point, Lake Superior, about 60 miles northwest of Sault Ste Marie. The dead:

Al Clements, steward, Rochester, Ind.

George Austin, watchman, of Cleveland.

The two vessels that crashed together in a fog were both of steel structure and about 400 feet long. Several of the crew and passengers of the Mitchell were taken on board the Mack more or less severely injured. Mrs. Al Clements of Rochester, wife of the Mitchell's steward, suffered a broken leg.

IRISH GREET KING.

Dublin, July 10.—Keeping holiday in honor of their majesties most of the shops remained closed today. Receiving and replying to addresses occupied both King George and Queen Mary during the early morning. The king subsequently held a levee in the throne room of the castle, among those present being American Consul Ewward L. Adams.

LAKE GAGE WATERS CLAIM BOY'S LIFE

Charles Hight, of Wauseon, Meets Death By Drowning At Resort.

BODY NOT RECOVERED

[Special to The Sentinel.]

Angola, Ind., July 10.—Charles Hight, 22, of Wauseon, Ohio, met death by drowning in the waters of Lake Gage, near this place, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Searching parties have been working all night and this morning, but from the latest reports the body of the drowned youth has not been recovered.

Hight, with three companions, was swimming from a boat a short distance from shore, when a breeze sprung up which floated the skill away from the bathers. A lad by the name of Kittner and young Hight were a considerable distance from the floating boat, and both of them sank under the waves. Kittner was rescued as he was sinking for the third time, but Hight was too far away for help to reach him and he went to his death before parties from the shore could reach the spot of his disappearance. All night long searching paries dragged the bottom of the lake and this morning the surface of the lake was spotted with scores of boats containing eager searchers. As yet the body has not been recovered.

Young Hight was the son of J. P. Hight, a minister of Wauseon, Ohio.

MICHIGAN JURIST DIES.

Justice Hooker, of Supreme Court, Passes Suddenly in East.

Auburn, N. Y., July 10.—Frank A. Hooker, justice of the supreme court of Michigan, a resident of Lansing, Mich., died suddenly in the New York Central station here early today. Justice Hooker, in company with Judges George S. Hosmer and N. A. Mandell, of the circuit court of Detroit, had been on an automobile tour of several weeks' duration.

The party had shipped their machines to Buffalo and arrived here yesterday. During the night Justice Hooker suffered an attack of heart trouble and decided to return home this morning by train. He had just entered the New York Central station when he suddenly fell forward and was picked up dead.

The body was shipped to Lansing today.

WATTERSON WILL SPEAK.

Will Address Banquet of Indiana Members of Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 10.—Col. Henry Watterson, the distinguished Kentucky editor, has accepted the invitation of the Indiana members of the Associated Press to make the principal address at their banquet in this city Sept. 21. A letter was received here today from Colonel Watterson saying he would be delighted to come to Indiana and meet the Associated Press editors and their friends on the occasion of the banquet.

A. H. Corey returned this afternoon to his home in Angola after a visit with friends here.

HEAT DRIVES FLYERS DOWN

Atwood and His Passenger Forced to Land Near Baltimore.

STARTED FROM ATLANTIC CITY

Expect to Complete Trip to Washington Later in the Day.

Baltimore, July 10.—Forced by intense heat with its accompaniment of extremely high humidity, to discontinue temporarily their flight by aeroplane to Washington, Harry N. Atwood and Charles K. Hamilton, who left Atlantic City at 5:04 o'clock a. m. today in the latter's biplane, descended shortly after 9 o'clock near Steamer's Run station, eight miles east of Baltimore, and came to Baltimore by train. They had traveled approximately 140 miles with but one stop, that at Farnhurst, Del., for gasoline.

Atwood and Hamilton hope to resume their journey to Washington later in the day. They expect to start from the landing place at Stemmers Run, fly over Baltimore and reach Washington in time for dinner.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 10.—Harry Atwood and "Charley" Hamilton chanced the elements again this morning and succeeded in making a good getaway at 4:50 o'clock on their flight to Washington. When they sailed out of sight they were making great speed, hampered by nothing more than a gentle westerly breeze. The weather was clear and ideal for their journey. Both men declared they would reach Baltimore by 10 o'clock unless something untoward occurred. "We will be at least a hundred miles from here by 7 o'clock," confidently shouted Atwood as the machine lifted from the ground after a perfect getaway.

The pair worked hard all yesterday getting the Hamilton biplane in shape for its trip. Parts of the machine in which Atwood made his flight here from New York were removed after the men had their narrow escape in the seventy-five foot plunge to earth yesterday. It was nightfall before the tail had been replaced, the new blades adjusted, the under structure repaired and the bent and twisted frame work turned up.

This morning Atwood and Hamilton left their hotel at 4 o'clock. The final preparations were made at the aerodome of Lieut. Willoughby, just back of Ventnor, and at 4:48 they wheeled the machine from the hanger. The

PEDAGOGUES IN BIG CONVENTION

A CLASSIC SETTING

San Francisco, July 10.—In surroundings typifying the best of the civilization and education of ancient Greece, the forty-ninth convention of the National Education association opened this afternoon in the Greek theater of the University of California at Berkely. The educators were welcomed to California by Governor Hiram W. Johnson, Mayor P. H. McCarthy, of San Francisco; C. C. Moore, president of the Panama Pacific exposition, and President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of the University of California. Response was made on behalf of the delegates by Robert J. Aley, president of the University of Maine.

Large Fund in Treasury.

The report of the board of trustees received during the day shows $104,000 in the association's permanent fund and the treasurer's report shows $9,000 added to this fund in the course of the year. The association's receipts are given as $48,909 and its expenditures as $34,978.

The trustees' report on the permanent fund does not carry the signature of President Ella Flagg Young, ex-officio member of the board. Mrs. Young has criticised the method of managing the fund several times since she took office.

SPORTING WRITER DIES.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 10.—John R. Mattingly, sporting editor of a local paper, died this morning of appendicitis. He was 37 years of age and was formerly employed in the postoffice at Washington, Ind. He was operated upon at a hospital a week ago and shortly after the operation was married to Mrs. Josephine Kittleson, of this city, upon what proved to be his deathbed. The body will be sent to his former home at Washington, Ind.

SUGAR PLANTER DIES.

COUNCIL IS ASKED TO AID

CITY SOLONS ARE URGED TO INQUIRE

Board Suggests Committee and Appropriation for Purpose.

Letters were today prepared by the board of public works addressed to the council making a report of the board's recent investigations at Indianapolis of the asphalt repair plant and garbage systems of that city.

After setting forth what was done and what was learned the board suggests that in respect of the garbage system the council appoint a committee and appropriate the money needed to either act cojointly with the board or by itself, as it may see fit, in prosecuting an inquiry in other cities with a view of learning what will be the best solution of Fort Wayne's garbage problem.

Board Wants to Solve Problem.

The board is anxious to take up the garbage matter and relieve conditions here and wants the assistance of the council in determining what will best serve the interests of the city in the most expeditious way in either repairing and enlarging the old garbage destruction plant or building a new one.

The board found Indianapolis almost as badly in distress by her garbage problem as Fort Wayne and so learned nothing there that will help Fort Wayne in solving the question.

It is probable that at the next meeting of the city council the garbage question will be presented in such form as to bring on some definite action with a view to solving it.

CRAZED BY THE HEAT.

Georgia Man Takes Possession of Steel Trust Affairs.

New York, July 10.—Business in the active offices of the United States Steel corporation was moving along in its accustomed complacency today when a man giving his name as C. E. Piper, of Atlanta, Ga., walked briskly into Chairman Gary's room and announced that he was now in charge of the corporation's affairs. He followed his declaration by calling a meeting of the board of directors.

When the executive force overcame its surprise Piper was escorted from the building and taken to Bellevue hospital for examination. It is supposed he was overcome by the heat.

NEW RUSSIAN DREADNAUGHT.

St. Petersburg, July 10.—The Poltava, the second of the four battleships of the dreadnaught type laid down in June, 1909, was launched at the admiralty dock yard today, the anniversary of the battle of Poltava. The vessel is of 23,000 tons and in dimensions and armament is the same as the Sevastopol, which was launched on June 19. She will carry twelve 12-inch guns, sixteen 4.7-inch guns and smaller artillery.

COMPLETES AVIATION RACE

Buechner, With a Passenger, is First to Reach Johannisthal.

Berlin, July 10.—Buechner, with a passenger, arrived at Johannisthal today, being the first of the aviators to complete the German circuit race. He wins the third prize, as Koenig and Volmuller have greater totals of mileage completed.

These three, with Laitsch, left Halberstadt at 3:20 o'clock this morning. Buechner reaching here three hours and six minutes later. All made the prescribed stop at Dessau, but the others descended before reaching Berlin and will continue here this evening. The latest stage was 127 miles, to which 25 per cent. mileage is added in the case of all three as a bonus for carrying a passenger.

MANY ARMY DESERTIONS

Deputy Marshal Gets Notice of 32 in Single Day.

Deputy United States Marshal A. R Walter today received official notice of thirty-two men who are wanted to face charges of having deserted from the United States army at various points in the country. The number of desertions has been very heavy during the past few months and federal officials are constantly on the lookout for these men.

THE CIRCUS OUT IN THE FAR WEST

The Big Show is Prepared for Days Ahead and All Turn Out.

RINGLING'S DRAW 'EM

"In the far west, where Indians and cowboys brush shoulders, the circus is hailed with the same delight as in other parts of the United States," said a representative of Ringling Brothers' circus, which is underlined to exhibit in this city on Friday, July 21.

"From the first day our advertising posters are displayed until the show rolls into town there exists no small amount of preparation. The Indians get busy with beaded work, while sons of the saddle hustle like beavers whipping matters into shape for a day off.

"It's a picturesque sight on show morning, I tell you. Here and there a bright red blanket topped off with a profusion of feathers; here and there a manly form clad in leather chaps, while in the background huddle squaws with papoose. Its a sight that causes show folk to tumble out of bed and realize they are many miles from Broadway.

"Performers generally contend that sight-seekers are rubes, especially when the gaze is trained in their direction. Out west the tables are turned. In that part of Uncle Sam's domain it is from the showman that the rube bell jingles. In the country of cattle, redskin and cow puncher the showman's eyes stand out like a doorknob and he becomes as true a member of the crane family as ever stretched a neck. The European performers, who have never been west before, chatter like a bunch of frightened monkeys and stampede every time a buck grunts in their proximity.

"And in that far away country people think as little of traveling 100 miles to see Ringling Brothers' circus as you do of going to the store for provisions. They load tent, cooking utensils and family in a wagon and start a week or ten days in advance. If they arrive in town before the show they camp out and await its arrival. The redman comes to town accompanied by his squaw, who, by the way, is compelled to ride astride the same pony or walk. Once in town, the lord of the tepee shakes his frau and hikes to the show grounds. If the squaw is fortunate enough to dispose of some beaded-work or trinkets she sees the performance. If not, the little lady must content herself with gazing at the side show paintings.

"The Indian is not a very attentive husband on circus day. He has a few dollars to spend and is too busy to bother with petticoats. He will invest in everything the showman offers from a toy balloon to a stick of barberpole candy, and as for feeding the elephants, he has Willie Smallboy beaten a Salt Lake City block. He is a scinch for the monkeys, too, but draws the line on the hippopotamus. The liberal-mouthed animal has but to give a healthy smile and Mr. Indian will beat a hasty retreat.

"The cowboys do not care much for the animals. They like the performance better and will yelp to beat the band when an act pleases them. Bareback riding, gymnastic acts and the ever-foolish clowns seem to strike the leather-lunged gentlemen about right. The cow puncher is a sport from hat to spur and treats his lady to everything on the circus calendar from red lemonade to reserved seat. He is simply dippy on show day and gets all the enjoyment out of it possible."

FORMER WABASH MACHINIST DEAD

John Sutton Passes Away At the Age of Sixty-Seven Years.

LONG RESIDENT HERE.

John Sutton, a pioneer resident of Fort Wayne and a former employe of the local Wabash shops, died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at the family residence, 651 Third street, at the age of 67 years, 3 months and 23 days. Death was due to kidney complaint.

The deceased was born in County Rexford, Ireland, March 17, 1844, and came to this country at an early age. He settled in Fort Wayne over forty years ago and had made this city his home since that time. He was employed as a machinist in the Wabash shops for a good many years, but retired from active labor about four years ago. He was a member of the Catholic Church of the Precious Blood and the Sacred Heart league. The surviving relatives include the widow and three children, Mrs. Mary Yerrick and Mrs. Frank Duell, and one son residing at Elwood, Ind.; five grandchildren, Paul, Claude, John, Edward and Frank Yerrick and one great grandchild.

VOLZ.

Mrs. Johanna Volz, aged 70 years, 8 months and 6 days, wife of Anthony Volz, died Sunday evening at the family residence, 525 Furman street. Death was due to senility following an illness of only a few days.

The deceased was born in Germany November 3, 1840, and came to this country a number of years ago. She was noted for kindly and charitable acts among the poor and needy and during her residence here had gained a large circle of friends. She was a devout member of St. Peter's Catholic church and of the Rosary society and the Sacred Heart league. Surviving relatives include the husband and three sons—Ulrich, Bayler and Adam Volz; one daughter, Mrs. Charles Gray, of Toledo; one brother and one sister, residing in Germany, and six grandchildren.

Funeral services Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock from the residence, thence to St. Peter's Catholic church at 9 o'clock. Interment at the Catholic cemetery.

SANDERS.

Mrs. Sarah G. Sanders, wife of L. P. Sanders, died Sunday evening at 6:40 o'clock at the family residence, 1111 Elmwood avenue, at the age of 61 years, death being due to a complication of diseases. The deceased was born in Mason county, Kentucky, and the remains will be shipped to Maysville, Ky., for funeral services and interment.

FAIR.

Andrew Fair, a pioneer resident of Allen county, died Saturday evening at 5:30 o'clock at the home of his son, Dr. C. S. Fair, two miles west of Fort Wayne on the Huntington road, at the age of 70 years, 5 months and 23 days. Death was due to infirmities of age. The deceased was well known in this city and throughout the county and had many friends. He is survived by two sons, Orr and Dr. C. S. Fair.

Funeral services Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock at Wallen church. Interment at Eel River cemetery.

HUTH.

Robert Huth, the two-day-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Huth, residing on Piqua avenue, one square south of Rudisill avenue, died early this morning of exhaustion. Funeral services were held from the residence this afternoon. Interment at the Catholic cemetery.

VINSON DEFALCATION BIG.

Indianapolis Man Thought to Be $56,000 Shy.

Indianapolis, July 10.—The case of Frank J. Vinson, auditor of the Brown-Ketcham Iron works of this city, who surrendered to the police last night following the issuance of a warrant charging him with embezzlement, was called in police court today and continued until next Saturday. It is alleged Vinson's shortage will total $56,000, but in the warrant he is charged specifically with the embezzlement of 4,460. He is out on $2,500 bonds signed by two of his neighbors in Woodruff place.

Vinson's wife, who is ill, continues in a critical condition and has not been told of her husband's arrest.

INDIANAPOLIS GETS RELIEF.

Indianapolis, July 10.—Following a wind with thunder and rain storm here shortly after noon today, the temperature dropped fourteen degrees, registering 73 at 1:30 this afternoon, according to the government weather bureau. The storm is believed to have effectually broken the heat wave which has caused much suffering and produced practically an ice famine.

CITY BREVITIES.

Louis K. Seaboid, furniture buyer for the Pickard House Furnishing company, who for the past week has been at the July market at Grand Rapids, has gone on to Chicago to attend the furniture exhibition in that city.

Relatives in this city have received word of the serious illness of Mrs. Hattie Leonard Wright, wife of Judge Wright, of Fort Dodge, Ia. Mrs. Wright is a sister of Captain Ivers Leonard and previous to her marriage lived in Fort Wayne.

The Past Chiefs Association of Pythian Sisters is to meet on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Julius Kiefer, who lives at Glendale. Those who attend are requested to take the 2 o'clock interurban Huntington car.

METEOROLOGICAL.

SUMMARY OF WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Warm weather continues to be general throughout the central and eastern states, maximum temperatures yesterday ranging from 90 to 95 degrees over most districts from the lake region and Ohio valley eastward to the Atlantic coast states; Boston, Washington, Chicago and St. Louis reported temperatures of 94 degrees. Scattered showers are reported from the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys and the lake region.

An area of high pressure which covers the north Pacific coast districts is giving cool weather throughout the extreme northwest, Helena reporting a temperature of 44 degrees this morning while at Yellowstone Park a temperature of 36 degrees and a light frost were recorded.

In this section conditions favor local thunder showers tonight or Tuesday, with not much change in temperature.

W. C. GEAKE TO LAY CORNERSTONE

Fort Wayne Man Chosen to Officiate for Masons At Auburn.

CEREMONY IS JULY 27

Attorney William C. Geake, of this city, has been chosen to officiate at the laying of the cornerstone of the new DeKalb county court house at Auburn on Thursday, July 27.

The event will be under Masonic auspices, and Grand Master W. S. Swintz, of South Bend, who finds himself unable to be present on the occasion, has commissioned Mr. Geake to perform the impressive ceremony of placing the cornerstone.

The program for the day is not yet complete, but Governor Marshall will deliver the principal address, and there will be a big gathering of citizens of DeKalb county and Masons from northern Indiana generally. It is expected that a big delegation of Fort Wayne Masons will accompany Mr. Geake to Auburn for the ceremony.

Mr. Geake is grand lecturer of the Indiana grand lodge of Masons, a position he has held for several years.

BIG CROWD AT ROBISON PARK.

Heat Drove Thousands to That Popular Cool Spot

Many people took advantage of the cool resting spots offered by Robison park yesterday afternoon and whiled away a few hours at the popular amusement grounds. The cars were loaded to the gunwales and the traction company was hard pressed to get all of the park visitors home last night. According to the report given out this morning by Manager Williams, there were 8,359 visitors at the park yesterday.

Since the hot weather has set in Robison park has been the mecca for great crowds in the afternoons and evenings; the dancing pavilion being more than popular every evening. For the past week the total attendance at the park has gone above 40,000. Fourth of July saw the largest crowd of the season, fully 15,000 people visiting the resort.

start was made almost in the tracks made by the smash-up of yesterday in which they both were in danger of losing their lives. Everything worked perfectly. Atwood, with Hamilton seated beside him, lifted the machine to a traveling altitude of 100 feet. First he circled over the meadows near the ocean and then darted the plane for the coast line. When they passed out of sight they were making good speed and still mounting higher.

Before leaving Atwood said he would make his first stop at Baltimore unless something happened before that city was reached.

CUNNING THIEF IS OUTWITTED

Reynard Comes Once Too Often to Feast and Gets in the Toils.

FOX IS REAL CULPRIT

From a startling report received this morning the citizens of this city can be on their guard for some new experiences. Everyone intending to be out in the wee hours ought to go armed with a repeating rifle or at least with a bowie knife to ward off the attacks of ferocious denizens of the neighboring jungles. It is hardly probable, though, that any real man-eaters will be discovered, but it is a fact that there are small animals in the community that can do great damage to stock and property.

For the past month considerable worry has been caused in the south part of the city by the mysterious disappearance of poultry. Chicken fanciers have been on the edge of nervous breakdowns, and no one could explain the loss of the feathered property. From numerous clues the poultry men arrived at the conclusion that the stealing was carried on by some wild animal. Weasles and rats were blamed for the loss, but as these small animals could not be detected in the act of stealing the owners of the fowls were not sure of their enemy.

Chicken men tried all kinds of methods to capture the culprit or culprits. After nights of shotgun vigil the hunt was almost abandoned and the hunters decided they were up against a hard proposition. Last night, however, the game came to the hunters' snare. F. J. Pool and Fred Duryee, of Fox avenue, set a small steel trap in one of their coops, and this morning the baffling mystery was cleared up. A half-grown young red fox was discovered, struggling in the trap. The animal met a speedy death, and the South Wayne poultry breeders are confident they will have no more trouble.

DOWN TO THE VERY LAST CAKE OF ICE

Hartford City Passes Through Ice Famine—Relief Arrives Sunday Morning.

Hartford City, Ind., July 10.—A car load of ice brought relief to the suffering people of this city yesterday morning and averted an ice famine with which the city has been threatened. Several sick persons were saved by the timely arrival of the car load of ice, and the little babes and children of the city were given appreciated relief. Another shipment of ice arrived this morning.

Fore the past week the supply of ice in the city has been running extremely low, and no purchases could be made in neighboring cities. The local ice companies limited the share of each family but at last the sick persons only were allowed a meagre share. Saturday noon the last cake was divided among the sick and the city had a famine staring it in the face. Due to the efforts of several of the leading citizens a car load of the precious stuff was dropped off from a through freight train and temporary relief was effected.

NEW REAL ESTATE BOOM.

Park Place Lots Soon To Be Placed On Sale.

Columbia City, Ind., July 10.—This has a new real estate boom on the way in the east end. The Joe Ruch property north of the Peabody mill is soon to be platted and put on the market by the Provident Trust company. The lots lie to the north of Van Buren street and at the end of Jackson street and are very desirable as residence sites but have never been put on the market as a whole. After they have been platted they will be offered at private sale on easy payments.

The addition is to be known as "Park Place" and there will be twelve or fifteen lots in all, one tier fo which will front on the north side of Jackson street. Nothing will be done on the property during the present hot weather but an opportunity to buy will be given the public before the season is over.

TO START ACTORS' COLONY.

George Belford Will Erect Many Cottages at Long Lake.

Kendallville, Ind., July 10.—Efforts are now being made by George Belford, manager of the Seven Belfords, famous acrobats, who are spending the summer at his 120 acre farm at Long Lake, just north of this city, to establish an actors' colony on the banks of the pretty lake.

It is Belford's intention to construct several modern cottages on the south side of the lake and induce several other actors, or as many as possible, to join in the enterprise and make the place one of the most delightful resorts for recreation and rest in this part of the state. This it is believed can easily be done at a moderate expense as the natural surroundings are such as to make the place one of the beauty spots in the Twelfth district.

NEARLY CREMATED.

Goshen Man Found Unconscious in Burning Building.

Goshen, Ind., July 10.—The fire department was called Saturday afternoon at 2:40 o'clock in response to an alarm from box No. 37, to a residence property belonging to B. G. Schaefer, and located near the canal on South Wilson avenue. The building was badly damaged.

The house was occupied by Harry Burns and it is believed he set it on fire. He bought four gallons of oil at the Ulery grocery and the floors were all saturated with it. When the doors were forced open he was found lying on the floor unconscious. Physicians were called and he was removed to a local hospital to be cared for. It is rumored that Burns, who had been drinking, attempted suicide.

TAKES CARBOLIC ACID ROUTE.

Auburn, Ind., July 10.—About 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, A. S. Baker, a local restaurant proprietor, was found dead in his bed with an empty carbolic acid bottle lying at his side. The dead man's lips were badly swollen from the poison and there is no doubt entertained concerning the cause of his death. Ill health, business reverses and domestic troubles are said to have fallen to his lot and caused him to adopt the "easiest way" methods.

TAPPED 8 TIMES

The following report in an extreme case of chronic Bright's Disease will interest physicians due to the fact that tapping has heretofore invariably attended fatal terminations. Under the new emollient treatment tapping does not prevent recovery.

Patient—six years old—the young son of A. C. Dean, of 1726 Ninth Ave., Oakland, Cal.

Chronic Bright's. Dropsy that had resisted all efforts was continually increasing. The family physician gave no hope and said the end was near.

At this critical moment the treatment was changed to Fulton's Renal Compound, the physician aiding it by holding up the heart and strengthening the little patient against collapse.

Case very stubborn—dropsy was so oppressive that the patient had to be tapped eight times. But as the tappings became further apart the albumen began to decline, diuresis increased, and the patient made a slow but steady recovery, and is now going to the public school in Oakland.

The new emollient treatment for Bright's and chronic kidney disease (Fulton's Renal Compound) shows an efficiency in about 87% of these hitherto incurable and fatal diseases. It can be had in Fort Wayne at the D. & N. Pharmacy, 624 Calhoun St.

We desire to hear from and advise with patients not noting improvement by the third week. Literature mailed free. John J. Fulton Co., 645 Battery St., San Francisco, Cal. We invite correspondence with physicians who have obstinate cases.

BANDMEN PLANNING BIG DAY AT BIPPUS

Opening of New Bank Means Holiday for Little Village—Outdoor Social Planned.

Bippus, Ind., July 10.—Plans are now being made to have a real holiday at this place on the day the new bank opens for business. The people of this community are waiting for the date with considerable interest and the day of the launching of the new enterprise at this place promises to be a day that will long be remembered.

The opening date for the bank has been set for July 15. The local band boys immediately got busy and announced a big outdoor social for that afternoon and evening. The Laketon and Urbana bands will join in the affair out of friendship for the Bippus boys and plenty of music is assured that evening.

Work on the new bank is being rushed and it is predicted everything will be all in readiness by the designated date. The contractor has found the remodeling job a big task, but additional workmen were put on and the work has gone ahead with good results and the building committee now begin to see the way clear ahead.

THREE CONVENTIONS.

Winona Will Entertain Three Meets This Week.

Warsaw, Ind., July 10.—Winona will entertain three big conventions this week. One will be the Indiana Photographers' association. Another will be that of the State Bar association. In addition the Women's clubs will be in session.

The State Bar association of Indiana begins its fifteenth annual meeting Tuesday, July 11 and will continue its work over July 12. The photographers will be in session Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and many of them will remain over for Friday, which is aviation day, the day Glenn H. Curtiss will make his flights.

LIGONIER YOUTH DROWNS.

Ligonier, Ind., July 10.—Shortly before noon yesterday, Fred Burk, 20, of this city, met death by drowning in the waters of Indian lake, a small but deep body of water close to the city. Burk was a weak swimmer and grew tired while swimming a great distance from shore. He fought to reach safety, but his strength gave out and he sank beneath the waves before help could reach him. The body was recovered about an hour after the accident. The deceased was a son of a well known farmer residing four miles west of the city. For the past few years he has held a position at one of the local carriage works.

PORTLAND MAN MISSING.

Portland, Ind., July 10.—Horace M. Spade is missing from his home on the Boundary pike in South Portland and all efforts of friends and relatives to locate him have been of no avail. His disappearance is enshrouded in mystery, as he left without telling anyone of his intention. His wife and children are inclined to believe that he has suddenly become mentally deranged and has probably committed suicide.

FACTORY MAN ELECTROCUTED.

Hartford City, Ind., July 10.—Temporarily changing places with his nephew, Clyde Prentiss, 27, unmarried, but soon to claim a bride, met death at the Southside factory in this city Friday evening when he received an electric shock. He succumbed instantly, life being extinct when Drs. Corey and Dodd arrived a few minutes later in response to a hurry call.

FIRE NEAR PORTLAND.

Portland, Ind., July 10.—The house, barn, granary and all otheer outbuildings on the James N. Hanlin farm, two miles northwest of Hector, and occupied by Harrison Cox, were completely destroyed by fire Friday afternoon, entailing a heavy loss. Practically all contents of the buildings were also destroyed, only a portion of the household furniture being saved.

EIGHTY-FOUR ARRESTS.

Wabash, Ind., July 10.—Since the reopening of the saloons in this city on April 6 there has been an unusual number of arrests. In the last three months 84 arrests have been made on charges of intoxication.

Never leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be obtained when on board the cars. For sale by all dealers.

WHAT THE EXPERTS SEE ALL CAN SEE.

All the experts who with critical eyes have examined Fort Wayne's three rivers agree with great enthusiasm that the possibilities for beautification are vast. It ought not to require expert vision to discern that, though the way Fort Wayne has been neglecting and defiling these streams for generations would make it so appear. The rivers have such a wealth of natural beauty which needs only care to bring it out that the shame of having permitted them to degenerate into their present state is a shame that will be lived down only when the streams have been cleansed, their banks cleaned and provision made to protect them from desecration. These rivers, as has been many times pointed out during the past year or so, constitute the city's greatest beauty asset. As they now are they simply emphasize a public negligence that scores heavily against the city's repute for taking care of itself. They are mere sluggish currents of filth—a sorrow to the eyes and an offense to the nostrils. The experts can point till their arms palsy at the great advantage we have in the rivers, but they can only point. The people must look to themselves for the means of realizing the possibilities. That is the purpose of the river beautification and sewer improvement project. Sewage must first be diverted from the streams and then the streams themselves must be cleansed. Their beds are a deposit of filth accumulated through many years. Their banks are unsightly with the misuse and neglect of a century. Fort Wayne is taking up this question and it should not be put down until it has been dealt with as a progressive and self-respecting community should deal with an issue so important.

Testimony was given in the city court a day or two ago by a woman who had been arrested on a warrant by the health authorities charging her with neglecting her garbage that she had paid a city garbage collector to remove her garbage and that he had not fulfilled his part of this private contract. Reports have reached this office that garbage collectors not infrequently accept jobs to clean cellars and other parts of private premises for which work they receive pay that goes into their own pockets. Is this one of the reasons why garbage cans are neglected sometimes for weeks? The board of public works should investigate these matters. If collectors are mulcting householders for the removal of garbage that the city pays by contract to have removed and put in their time cleaning cellars, outhouses, backyards and alleys and taking pay for it while they neglect the public service for which public money is spent, there ought to be something doing shortly and something done shortly after. There are more jokers of one kind and another in Fort Wayne's garbage system than commonly appear.

The peace that has settled upon Mexico during the past month or so is so perfect as to be almost ominous. Diaz himself, with his iron hand and steeled heart, never preserved order better nor with less fuss. The new order of things seems to be working its way with great success and the future now seems bright with promise of tranquility, prosperity and enlarged freedom and multiplied privileges for the people. The coming elections will greatly test the strength of the ne wregime, but there is no present indication that all will not go well when Mexicans for the first time participate in a truly popular way in a popular election. No event since Diaz left can be interpreted as an omen of a coming time when the republic will have occasion to call the exile home.

Mr. Ballinger may have been doing the right thing in respect of the Alaska lands when he was at the head of the interior department, but it is noticeable that about everything now going on in that department relating to the public domain in Alaska is based on a policy quite the contrary of that pursued by the man whom Gifford Pinchot succeeded in running out of the Taft administration. Of course it all has the approval if not the mandate of the president—which causes one to wonder what the president's former estimates of Mr. Ballinger would read like if they were now to be revised.

Ireland is treating George V. with polite deference, reserving her heartiness unto that time when he can come over and congratulate the Irish people on the establishment of real self-government. "Welcome—we want home rule," was the way Dublin was placarded for his majesty. It was a polite hint that if he wants something warmer he can get it by pitching in to help Ireland get what Ireland wants, what Ireland has been promised and what Ireland should have.

Fort Wayne's money should not be wasted upon a crematory that will prove unequal to all that the people expect of it. The new one—for no money ought to be spent trying to make the old one answer—should be adequate to all present calls upon it and capable of expansion to meet future needs as the city expands. True economy will consist in getting the best and enough of it to leave nothing to be wished for. And then the city should devise and enforce a system of collection that will collect. Without that a dozen crematories would be futile.

The senate, not having had the advantage of two days at sea where billows bound and the salt breezes frolic, finds itself still further handicapped in the hold-out game with the president. Mr. Taft doubtless is in trim for another hard spurt at waiting for reciprocity to come through as it was started.

After reciprocity comes the wool schedule and the free list bill. The senate's vacation will not be represented by a very wide gap between the present extra and the next regular.

A private contract with a public garbage collector ought to get results and in one case it did. The woman who was paying was arrested for neglecting her garbage.

That hot wave that passed last week seems to be making a round trip.

THE PUBLIC AND THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

(The Journal of the American Medical Association, July 8, 1911.)

The ready response of the public to appeals for better health conditions is a most surprising and gratifying result of the rapidly altering state of public opinion on health matters. The people are ready for any reforms. Recent examples of this fact will readily occur to those who have been watching public health progress. One of these is the recent remarkable crystallization of public opinion on the common drinking cup; another is the equally rapid progress of the campaign against insect carriers of disease and especially of flies. These pests have been causing annoyance and disgust to all cleanly-minded people, as well as distributing diseases, for centuries. If anyone had predicted ten years ago that great American newspapers and civic organizations would inaugurate a definite campaign against flies, he would have been regarded as hopelessly visionary. Yet the American Civic association has established a "fly-fighting committee," has reprinted an article on "The House Fly as a Carrier of Disease" from the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, has distributed instructions on how to conduct an anti-fly campaign, and has sent out a special bulletin entitled "Kill Flies and Save Lives." It is surely a promising indication when so learned a body as the American Academy of Political and Social Science considers an article on the house fly worthy of a place in its periodical.

Accompanying the literature sent out by the fly-fighting committee of the American Civic association is a request that all persons going to summer resorts write the proprietors of summer resort hotels, making definite inquiries as to health conditions at these places. The danger of summer resorts as centers of infection is well recognized. Many a local commissioner of health has earnestly and successfully striven to eradicate typhoid fever in his city to find each fall an outbreak of disease following the return of summer resorters, who had become infected during their stay in the country by dirty water or milk, unwashed vegetables, flies or other means by which typhoid is distributed. The committee asks all those contemplating a trip to summer resorts to write a letter similar to the following to all summer resort proprietors:

Before making plans for the summer vacation I wish to be assured that the sanitary conditions of the resort which I select are such as to make my stay permanently beneficial as well as pleasant for the time being. Will you, therefore, kindly advise me what are your sources of water supply and your methods of sewage and garbage disposal? I prefer to spend my vacation where I need have no fear of malaria from mosquitoes, or typhoid fever from flies and polluted water supply. Is your drinking water protected from contamination by your own sewage or that of others, and are your guests protected from flies and mosquitoes, not only by screens for doors and windows, but by precautions taken to prevent the breeding of these insect pests in your neighborhood?

You are doubtless well informed as to the dangers of health arising from neglect of the sanitary precautions on which physicians are now laying much stress; nevertheless, I take the liberty of sending you some recent literature on the subject, which may give you suggestions for the further improvement of local conditions; for I believe you will agree with me that whatever raises the reputation of a resort for healthfulness, raises the revenues of its proprietor.

More and more is the campaign for better health conditions becoming one of economics rather than of sentiment. As soon as hotel and boarding house keepers are convinced that cleanliness is profitable and that filth will diminish their receipts and increase their expenses, perfect sanitary conditions in summer resorts will become as much a business asset as are pine woods, beautiful lakes, cool breezes and low temperature.

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN.

(Montgomery Advertiser.)

Two small items in the day's news reminds us that humanity's upward climb is slow, and that barbarity and cruelty are not as far behind us as we sometimes believe.

A vicious mob murdered a twelve-year-old child in Thoredale, Texas. This revolting piece of cruelty is reminiscent of the barbarity of the middle ages. Nothing so wantonly criminal has been told in the day's news in many years. In an American town, with schools and churches close by, with every evidence of the civilization of which we boast so proudly at hand, a child is dragged through the streets with a chain about his neck, choking and pleading, and done to death in the sight of the homes which sheltered gentle women and innocent children. What manner of men is it who could do such a viciously cruel deed!

Again an incident in a Mexican town illustrates the latent cruelty in mankind, although no bloody crime marked the happening. A German civil engineer, a man of education, was forced by a crowd of Mexicans at the point of a pistol to take off his shoes and wait upon them in abject humility. The cruel purpose of the armed men was to humiliate the man's pride and self-respect; to force him through an experience, the memory of which would be as anguish in the coming years. The act was but an expression of that barbarity which harks back to the middle ages and which we have not yet left behind us.

WHAT THE CITY FORESTER CAN DO

Trees in Large Towns Mean Work, Foresight and Progress—Brooklyn Man Describes Some of the Ways in Which Citizens Can Aid the Municipality—School Children, Too.

(Jacob J. Levison, Forester, Park Department, Brooklyn, N. Y., in the Survey.)

Trained foresters often consider city tree problems too small to deserve their skilled attention. That all rests with the forester himself. He can make it small or he can find a field even more varied and of as high a standard as the work of those connected with the national forests.

The city tree is the natural stepping stone to the broader problem of national forest preservation. If forest legislation is to be effected at all, then the interest of all citizens must be enlisted. The average man acquires his first lesson in forest conservation from the trees around his own home, in which he is naturally most interested and which have to him a definite meaning. The forester in his plea for the saving of national resources, unless the public has been taught some phases of the question in terms of local conditions, will fail to convert as many to his way of thinking on forest policies as he would had more attention been paid to city trees and their relation to forestry.

More Than Ordinary Problems.

The ordinary problems of the city forester are planting, extermination of insects and disease, and protecting the street trees from accidental or willful injury, such as cutting down of trees by shopkeepers whose stores they may slightly screen; protecting the trees from injury by public service corporations and private promoters, and guarding them aginst gnawing horses, house movers and street graders. There are different ways of doing even this work. There may be the old-fashioned erroneous way or the way of the modern scientific forester. There are very few trained foresters in this country in charge of park and street trees and the old-fashioned methods or rather no methods, still prevail.

Trees for the Parks.

But there are bigger problems in city tree work. The city forest park idea affords a chance to establish a model forest right in the city and to lay the principles of conservative forest management right at the threshold of every citizen. The parks of our cities have hitherto been looked upon in most instances as storehouses for elaborate buildings, ornamental cut stone and floral designs, so that today the common conception of a city park is the usual costly and ornamental park found in almost every city. Persons usually do not think of the possibility of having bits of woodland or miniature forests in the city. There are only a few forest parks in this country and while the cities are still young, it is possible for them to set aside small tracts of woodland in their suburbs at a small cost, and within a few years they will find themselves the possessors of ground not only worth many times the original cost, but also of inestimable value to the health and development of the citizens.

What Brooklyn Does.

The people of Brooklyn and Queens have set aside a tract of 535 acres of woodland in the heart of the city for a forest park and they are not a bit sorry for it now. There have as yet been no funds designated for the development of this tract, but we succeeded in establishing there a forest nursery of 80,000 seedling trees at a cost of one and one-half cents per tree, including the planting. This, too, is a novel feature in the city tree work and offers unlimited opportunities to the city forester. Citizens and school children come to study this nursery and they are beginning to realize that tree planting is not so expensive after all. Even where we have been obliged to buy larger trees for our park planting, we have this year purchased 500 oaks and many other hardy trees two inches in diameter at $2 apiece. Instead of resorting to the usual method of buying larger trees at $10 and $12. The younger trees will take better to the soil, can be planted at a considerably smaller expense and in the end will catch up in growth with the larger specimens.

Citizens Often Help.

The city forester can make his influence strongly felt. He is constantly in touch with citizens, helping them to solve their local tree problems. He meets them in their homes, he lectures to them in the public schools and to civic and social organizations, he writes for the local papers, magazines and school journals.

The city forester can bring the parks and boulevards in closer touch with citizens. He can teach them to know the common trees by labeling prominent specimens in the parks and along the boulevards. He can issue guides to the trees for those desirous of more detailed study; he can have exhibits showing the various phases of tree planting and care. In Brooklyn we have had four exhibits of this sort in the past year. He can form tree clubs among adults and among school children and designate to them definite problems in the planting and care of the trees in their locality.

Tree Clubs Are Growing.

We already have several such tree clubs in our schools and the adult club idea is spreading with equal rapidity. Several have been recently formed in Brooklyn where the residents of certain streets got together for the purpose of planting trees co-operatively on their street. This method insures uniformity of species, form and age in the trees and considerably reduces the cost. It also brought out innate civic pride of the club members, and instead of stopping short with the trees, they invariably went right on seeking other improvements and inspiring the residents of their neighboring streets to do the same.

The schools are much in need of trees around them and the children can be made to plant them. The conditions in Brooklyn show this, where, out of the 166 public schools, 96 or 58 per cent. have no trees at all, 60 or 36 per cent. have a few trees, and only 10 or 6 per cent. are completely surrounded by trees. In other cities, the conditions are not much better.

A Growing Cause for Good.

The majority of our towns and cities are not yet awake to their tree problems. It is quite true that their civic pride has been aroused in many instances to definite action, but their leaders have selected other banners of reform and overlooked the trees. This is not because their trees do not need attention. The trees of almost every city in the country are suffering from neglect. Trees are too tolerant of abuse to go all at once, but their decay and ruin are matters of certain progress if once neglected. When the ill effects become evident people blame the caterpillars or the fungi. But the caterpillars are only one factor in the problem and civic uplifters who ought to know better are the other. Here then is a field for champions in the cause of tree preservation. It is pioneer work and the cause needs good men. If trained foresters in response to a public demand enter the work, our cities will become awave with trees and the minds of citizens alive with interest and sympathy for the forest problems of our country.

For summer diarrhoea in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, and a speedy cure is certain. For sale by all dealers.

CATHOLIC SOCIETIES.

Editors of Catholic Papers Meet With American Federation.

For the first time in connection with a convention of the American Federation of Catholic societies, to be held at Columbus, O., Aug. 20 to 21, there will be a convention of editors of Catholic periodicals. The aims are personal acquaintance and discussion of methods by which such periodicals may be improved.

The apostolic delegate at Washington, Mgr. Falconio, will be the celebrant of the mass at the Columbus convention, and principal speakers will be Archbishop Messmer, of Milwaukee, and Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, two of the founders of the federation, and Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati. Former Secretary Bonaparte, of Baltimore, will be another speaker and principal guest at the banquet.

There is to be a parade on Sunday, Aug. 20, at which it is expected 12,000 will be in line. In this federation, among others, are the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Knights of Columbus, the great bodies of organized Catholic laymen, whose combined membership run into the hundreds of thousands.

THOUSANDS RESUME WORK.

Army of New England Textile Operatives Back in the Mills.

Boston, July 10.—More than 31,000 operatives employed in textile mills in various parts of New England resumed work today after shut-downs of varying lengths in accordance with the policy of curtailing production adopted by the mill managements. At Manchester, N. H., 18,000 operatives returned to their machines in the Amoskeag Manufacturing company's mills after a lay off of ten days. Six thousand hands went back to the mills in Biddeford, Me., after two weeks of idleness, and more than 7,000 employes in mills at Clinton, Chicopee and Ware, Mass., resumed work.

The Ideal Auto Co. started their new model one-ton truck on a 2,000 mile demonstration and "trade-boosting" trip this afternoon, the route being from this city to Indianapolis, where it joins the "Indiana Four State Tour," leaving Indianapolis with forty other Indiana made automobiles, through Terre Haute, across Illinois, through Missouri, north through Iowa, returning to Indianapolis via Davenport, Chicago, Michigan City and Logansport, and thence back to Fort Wayne. The trip will last two weeks. The machine left in charge of James Case, the driver, who will be joined at Indianapolis by Mr. T. A. Sperry, general manager of the company, who will complete the run with the machine. The truck carries its full load the entire trip, which will average 125 miles a day.

Mrs. S. W. Greenland, wife of the assistant general manager of the traction system, arrived in the city this morning from Bridgeport, O. Mr. and Mrs. Greenland have taken the Emmons residence on South Fairfield avenue.

NEW ROUTE FOR CARS WEDNESDAY

Blockade On Broadway to Make Many Changes Necessary.

PLAN SCHEMED OUT

Before you board a street car in Fort Wayne Wednesday and thereafter, stop and do some figuring. Your first impression may not be the one that will land you at your destination, if that destination be in Broadway territory, south of the Pennsylvania railroad.

The blockade on Broadway, occasioned by the beginning of track elevation will make necessary a considerable rearrangement of street car routing. The plan as schemed out by the traction officials will carry the Broadway-South Wayne cars over precisely the same route as they now traverse, with the exception of the section of Broadway south of the Pennsylvania tracks. This will be covered by two short line cars operating from South Wayne avenue on Creighton, one running west and north on Broadway to the Pennsylvania tracks, and the other west on Creighton and South on Broadway to the end of the line. These cars will alternate. Belt line cars will operate to the Pennsylvania tracks on Broadway from either direction, reversing the runs as the tracks are reached. Other city lines will not be affected.

Increases Calhoun Traffic.

But the change will overturn all existing routing arrangements for interurban cars on both the Huntington and Bluffton line and will have the effect of sending all of them upon Calhoun street, both incoming and outgoing. Huntington cars will come into the city from Taylor street by way of Broadway, Creighton avenue and Calhoun street, reaching the interurban station by way of West Main and Harrison streets. Bluffton cars will come in by way of Broadway, Creighton avenue and Calhoun, and both passenger and freight cars must use this route.

In order to maintain the present schedule over the increased mileage it is planned to use what are termed "booster" cars. These are extras, and in order to make the time they will leave the Fort Wayne station about fifteen minutes earlier than the present scheduled leaving time in each case. It will enable them to reach Broadway and Taylor street precisely on the present schedule, so that except inside the city the interurban schedule will not be affected. The crews will "swing," the "booster" crew bringing in the regular and the extra car continuing the regular run. This will, of course, make the arrival of incoming Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana interurban cars at the union station approximately fifteen minutes later than schedule.

Leaving the city the interurbans will all go out by way of Columbia and Calhoun streets and the local cars will make stops at the transfer corner, Jefferson street, the railroad stations, Calhoun and Wallace streets, Calhoun and Creighton avenue, Creighton avenue and South Wayne avenue and Creighton avenue and Broadway.

RECALLS BANQUET GIVEN YEARS AGO

Menu is Found of Complimentary Dinner Given by Citizens of Fort Wayne in 1865 to Hon. Hugh McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury.

A notable banquet occasion in Fort Wayne forty-six years ago is recalled by a menu card which John L. Hanna, of Philadelphia, has just sent to J. R. McCulloch. It was the complimentary banquet tendered by the people of Fort Dayne to Hon. Hugh McCulloch, upon the latter's first visit to his old home here after his elevation to membership in President Lincoln's cabinet as secretary of the treasury.

The banquet was given at the old Rockhill house, now St. Joseph's hospital, October 11, 1865, and the invitation is one which had been sent to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Hanna, parents of J. R. Hanna, who discovered the card in a scrap book kept by his mother and was forwarded to the grandson of the distinguished financier, who was the guest of honor on that occasion.

The menu is a four-page affair, printed in purple upon a card with embossed floral border. The title page, bearing a figure of an American eagle, reads as follows:

Complimentary
Banquet
to
Secretary Hugh McCulloch, at the
Rockhill House,
October 11th, 1865.

The typography is of the style prevalent in those days, but now seen no more, and the second and third pages are devoted to the menu for the banquet. It was grouped under the general head of "Refreshments," and is so elaborate in character as to leave no doubt but that banqueters of those days dined extremely well. The final page is given over to the wine list, which is also elaborate in character, from champagne to old rye whisky and ale.

It is probable that very few people are living today who were guests at that complimentary dinner. Judge Robert S. Taylor is one of them, though he says he was present in the capacity of a newspaper reporter for the old Fort Wayne Gazette. His memory of the event is somewhat indistinct as to detail, but as Judge Taylor recalls it the banquet was served in the open air upon the lawn in front of the Rockhill house.

The civil war had come to a close but a few months before, and while Mr. McCulloch had been secretary of the treasury less than a year, his time had been largely spent in Washington for several years previously as comptroller of the currency. The dinner was Fort Wayne's expression of esteem for its distinguished citizen, and in his address on that occasion Mr. McCulloch referred somewhat to his strong attachment for Fort Wayne.

"No place will ever be so dear to me as Fort Wayne," said Mr. McCulloch on that occasion; "no friendships will ever be so strong as those which I have formed here. I am, you know, one of the pioneers of this beautiful city. When I crossed the St. Mary's, swimming my horse by the side of a canoe on the 23rd of June, 1833, Fort Wayne was a hamlet, containing a few hundred souls; an Indian trading post, a mere dot of civilization in the heart of a magnificent wilderness. Under my own eye, as it were, it has become a city of nearly twenty thousand people, a city full of enterprise and vigor, the second city of the state. I am proud of Fort Wayne and of the noble state of Indiana—a state which has been second to no state in the union in her devotion to the government and in the gallantry with which her sons have defended it. I am thankful when I crossed the mountains, in common parlance, 'to seek my fortune,' my feet were directed to Indiana and especially to this place. Wherever duty may call me hereafter, this will ever be to me my home. Many of my kindred sleep in our beautiful cemetery, and there, I trust, will be my resting place when I am called upon to join the great company of the departed."

While Secretary McCulloch retained to the last his deep interest in Fort Wayne, his realty interests in the vicinity of Washington led him to spend his last years there, and at his death his remains were interred there in accordance with a wish expressed in his later days.

ONE SUNDAY JAG FOR CITY COURT

Charles Jones Says He Bought His Beer at Germania Park.

THE MONDAY DOCKET.

Judge Frank Mungovan found one Sunday drunk waiting for him in the city court today in the person of Charles Jones, who says he bought his beer at Germania park yesterday afternoon, although he is not a member of the organization and that he had none of the service tickets generally issued to the members.

He is from Goshen and says that Jones is his real name and that he left the park at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was still very drunk at midnight when he was arrested and Prosecutor Harry Hilgemann questioned him closely to find out whether he had purchased drinks at any other place, but he stuck to his original story.

He was let go with instructions to get back to Goshen as fast as he could and he said he would do so.

The Germania park management says that if Jones got anything to drink there he must have slipped in with a party of excursionists made up of German singing societies from that city who were guests at the park Sunday. There was some skepticism of Jones' statement that he got his last drink at the park at 4 o'clock, for he was still very drunk when arrested after midnight.

Will Test Ordinance.

An affidavit was filed against Michael Sheridan charging him with selling produce on the city market after 11 o'clock Saturday and he will have a hearing tomorrow.

It is understood that he courted arrest on the charge in order to test the city ordinance governing the new market house. Some time ago renters insisted on having their receipts endorsed showing they paid their stall rent under protest and it was thought at the time an effort would be made to show that the measure is faulty. He did not indicate which clause of the ordinance will be attacked, although it is generally conceded that the market people will insist on remaining until they have disposed of their entire stock.

The Other Cases.

John Johnson was fined $1 and costs for drunkenness. John Lee was held until Saturday and Harlan Meyer was let go.

William A. Rinehart was acquitted of the charge of throwing garbage in the rear of the premises at Taylor and Broadway. He owns the property but does not occupy it and no evidence was offered to show he was the offender.

BOTH WERE CURIOUS.

The man was standing behind a tree in front of an apartment house, when the cop on that beat came pounding along on the sidewalk. It was close to midnight and naturally the cop stopped and looked at the man standing behind the tree.

"Howdy," says the cop, by way of opening conversation.

"You're another," replied the man good naturedly.

"Whutchuch doin'—waitin' fer somebody?" inquired the policeman.

"No."

"Just standin' there, hey?"

"You've hit it."

"Live near here, do you?"

"Right in there," says the citizen, pointing his thumb in the direction of the apartment house he was standing in front of.

The cop looked at him thoughtfully for a minute. "Mebby it's none of my business," he says, "and then again mebby it is. I don't like to go 'round buttin' into anybody's private affairs, but tell me, neighbor, what's your graft, anyhow?"

"Well," loosened up the citizen, "if it's a case of me tellin' you or you croakin' from suriosity right in front of my eyes, I'll tell you how it is—provided it don't go any further. My wife says to me when I started downtown this evening: 'If you're not home by midnight I'm going to pack up and go right back to mother's. So there!'"

"Well?" says the cop.

"Well," repeated the citizen, "it's just about midnight now, and I'm like you—I've got curiosity. I'm waiting here to see if she's going to keep her word."

The cop's curiosity ceased at that point and he walked on down street whistling, without waiting to see the thing out.—New York Press.

MADERO IS A BUSY MAN.

Special Telegraph Wires Connect His Office With the Outside World.

(New York World.)

Back from his swing through the south, Francisco I. Madero faced an accumulated mass of business which probably, by comparison, made even the daily bulk of the work of the president of the republic seem mild. Finding that it was no longer possible to receive the daily increasing throng at his home at the corner of Calle Berlin and Liverpool, he opened offices yesterday at Paseo de la Reforma No. 29, and the organization of a business staff, which would do credit to a large commercial establishment, was begun. Special telegraph wires are being installed connecting his offices with those of the federal telegraph so that he may have immediate communication with all parts of the country.

Probably 500 persons sought interviews with the chief of the revolution during the day. Of these only a small portion could be accommodated.

While conferences with commissions from the state of Vera Cruz, Aguascalientes, San Luis Potosi and Jalisco doubtless had important bearing on the local conditions in the sections mentioned, the call of General Reyes and Ernesto Madero, who remained together with the leader talking for nearly an hour, was the one feature of the day which set the political gossips buzzing.

Malay—Cohen.

Miss Leah Cohen and Mr. Vaun B. Malay were married on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride and her brother at 815 Nelson street by Rev. Earle M. Todd, pastor of the West Jefferson Street Church of Christ. The bride has been the organist at that church for several years. Only immediate relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the bride were present at the wedding, which was particularly quiet owing to the recent death of the bride's mother, Mrs. Frances Cohen. The bride wore a rich gown of white crepe de chine with trimmings of princess lace and pearl bands. The rooms were decorated in field flowers, black-eyed Susans forming an effective coloring with ferns and vines, and the room in which the marriage service was read was done in white and green. Mr. Malay is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Malay, of Kalamazoo, Mich., and later in the summer will take his bride on a lake trip and to visit his parents. The bride has been prominent in musical circles for many years and aside from playing the organ and directing the choir at the synagogue of Achduth Vasholom and in the West Jefferson Street Church of Christ she has been much in demand as a piano accompanist. She has taught a large class of pupils in Huntington, and has taken active part in the Morning Musical society, of which she has long been a member. The bride has a large acquaintance and very many friends.

Hake Flemion.

Miss Lucile Flemion and Mr. Otto Hake were married on July 5 at St. Joseph's Catholic church at Hesse Cassel at 8 o'clock by Rev. Max Bensinger. A sister of the bride, Miss Mayme Fleming, and a brother of the bridegroom, Mr. John Hake, were the bridesmaid and groomsman and two small sisters of the bride were flower girls. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk net made over light blue silk and embroidered handsomely with silk. The bride wore a veil held with a wreath of swansonia blossoms and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid wore a white dotted Swiss gown with trimmings of Irish lace, flowers in her hair and carried white roses. The flower girls were dressed in white and carried pink roses. After the church service the bridal party and immediate family relatives partook of a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents who live about two miles from the church where the wedding took place. The bride is a professional nurse and has occupied such responsible positions as that of head nurse in the Huntington hospital and the Wabash railroad hospital at Peru. She is a fine young woman with many devoted friends. Mr. Hake is a prosperous farmer and with his bride has begun housekeeping at once on a farm near Hoagland.

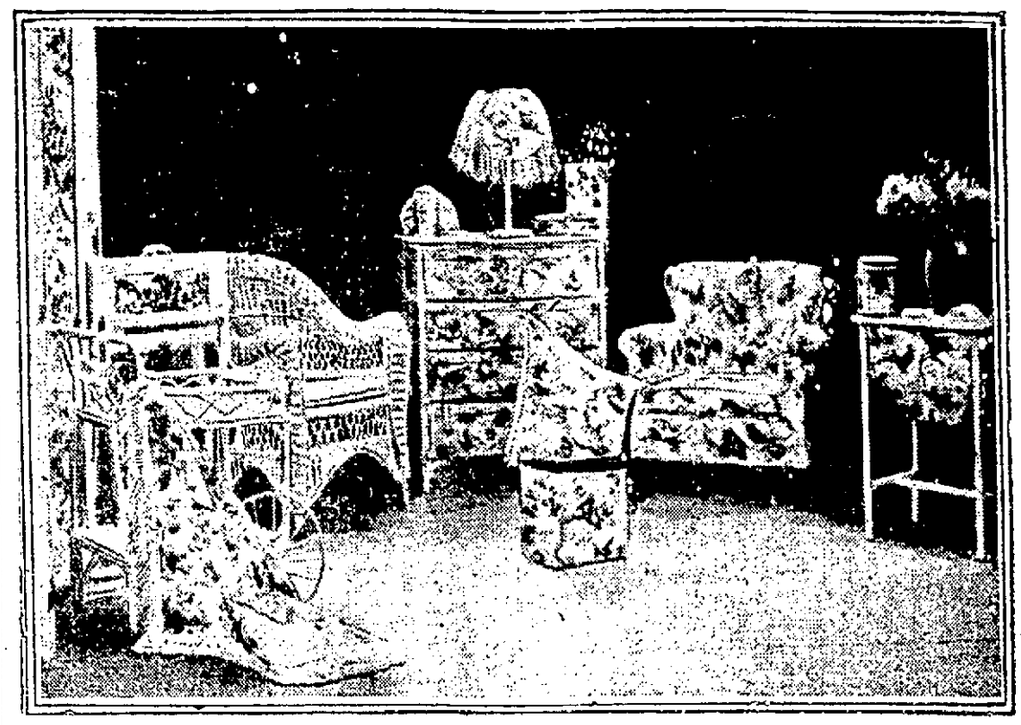
CRETONNE FIXTURES FOR SUMMER HOME



When the College Girl Comes Home

A young girl recently returned from boarding school wished to renew immediate friendships with a number of girls whom she had not seen for the entire nine months of the school year. She realized the best and most gracious way to accomplish this object was to arrange some pretty little informal affair at which they could all meet and chat in true girlish fashion, so she invited them to a porch party.

The veranda was in its summer dress of rambler roses, honeysuckle and clematis, so very little decorating was necessary. Cool porch furniture, mattings and gay pillows completed the setting. When the guests arrived they were greeted warmly. Their hostess had invited them to bring their sewing, and in the briefest possible time they were dotting their conversation wth exclamation points over various dainty bits of needlework. By diplomatic questions and a proper show of interest in the affairs of her set, the girl who had been away to school was right back in her accustomed niche, received with open arms and renewed gladness.

At sunset the tea table made its appearance, the hostess serving her guests with seasonable sandwiches, iced chocolate piled high with whipped cream, and candy. Lacking the cosey veranda the party could have been given in the cool library or living room with open windows, partially lowered blinds and plenty of flowers and greenery, giving an outdoor appearance.

ITEMS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

It seems impossible to achieve the joyous holiday spirit without going away from home to find it. But once away from home one place seems to produce it as well as another. The visitors from out of town are easily recognized by their cheerful expressions, their air of interest in everything, their amiable tolerance of minor mishaps. The average New Yorker does not display these characteristics until he goes to the seaside or the country. Why, in the name of common sense, in our chosen abodes, among our chosen people, must we appear solemn, care weighted beings, incapable of discovering any inspiration to mirth in our own "sights," which, indeed, it bores us exceedingly to point out to strangers? Perhaps an explanation of the reason we are lighthearted when away from home is found in the simple fact that we don't own a stick or stone in a place we visit and have not the least responsibility for its politics or government. Property has its compensations, no doubt, but it does not seem to increase the gayety of its possessors. It follows you cannot be happy about nothing if you have something. Therefore the very poor enjoy their merrymakings much more thoroughly than their richer brothers, and the tramp probably tastes pleasure pure and undiluted because he rejoices altogether without reason.

The Power of Music.

Music exercises an extraordinary fascination over the human senses. Under the influence of melodious sounds men and women are actually thrown into a state of temporary hallucination in which they believe in things that are not true. When a haunting love refrain or a melting waltz vibrates through the air poetry and romance exist for us. If we are married our commonplace mates, whose limitations we learned long ago and philosophically tolerate, are transformed into the delightful dream lovers who would certainly never have looked at our imperfect selves. They become lovers all beauty and grace, whom merely to think of is pure delight. These dream figures never have dyspepsia or toothache. If they are women they never develop nerves and wear false curls in the evening, or in the shape of men they do not become bald and portly as time goes on. If we are single the effect is still more delectable, as no disturbing memories of reality interfere with our rapture. Small wonder musical plays are so much appreciated, since they are the modern substitute for the song Tannhauser learned in the mountain of Venus.

Looking on Both Sides.

A very painful idiosyncrasy for its possessor is always to be able to see both sides of a question. It is so much nicer to take one absolutely, to recognize black from white, and to be certain one is in the right. Those people who are perfectly sure when they cannot get their own way that they are very ill used are to be envied. An undeserved grievance is such a comfortable thing that it is intolerable bad luck to be obliged to wonder whether it may not be deserved after all. Everybody would rather be shabbily treated by Fate than ask himself if he has any right to the fortune he has. If a person is wicked it is much more satisfactory to turn up one's nose at him uncompromisingly than to imagine one might have been as evil as he is in his circumstances, perhaps worse. Then it is so tiresome when one quarrels wits somebody to remember his good qualities. It puts one in the wrong, and, if he be made of sterner stuff, gives him an unfair advantage. Therefore, as said in the beginning, it is a painful idiosyncrasy to look on both sides of the question and much more comfortable to stick to one.

CREPE GARMENTS COOL.

If the laundry bill is a bugbear—and strange laundries and laundresses are sometimes a startling expense—crepe garments will help keep down the cost. Garments of this cool, pretty stuff may be readily washed and when laundered they need no ironing—and any woman can see at a glance what a help that would be.

There are, in addition to crepe blouses (and these are always in good taste) crepe nightgowns, crepe corset covers and crepe drawers and petticoats. One may procure them already made up or make them at small expense, for the crepe is not expensive by the yard, and the garments need little trimming.

RECIPES

Hot Dumplings.

Scald a pint of milk and melt in it one tablespoonful of sugar, one large tablespoonful of shortening and a teaspoonful of salt. When lukewarm add a half yeast cake dissolved in a little warm water and sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Knead lightly for five minutes then put in a bowl, cover and keep warm until the dough is very light and puffy. Divide in small biscuits and let stand for about fifteen minutes or until they begin to rise nicely again. Drop into a kettle partly filled with boiling water, cover and keep at a gentle boil for twenty minutes. Skim out and serve with rhubarb sauce. These dumplings can also be steamed if preferred. They are extremely good.

Gelatine Pudding.

Soak one-half of a box of gelatine in one-half of a cupful of cold water. Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk in a double boiler, pour it over the yolks of four eggs beaten with one-half of a cupful of sugar. Return to the double boiler and stir until the mixture thickens. Take from the fire, add the soaked gelatine, stir until dissolved and strain. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla, add quickly the whites of the eggs whipped to a stiff froth, and as soon as well mixed turn the pdding into a wetted mold.

KITCHENETTES.

When canning it is well to know that all preservatives are dangerous. Anything that will overcome the gases tending to spoil canned fruit is liable to prevent their digestion and so is not advisable.

Cold water is preferable to warm for scrubbing floors because it does not sink into the wood and so dries quickly.

Better results are obtained from the use of the scrubbing brush by moving it in the direction in which the grain of the wood runs, instead of across it.

Sponges should be washed free of soapsuds each time they are used and hung up to dry. As often as possible scald them in soda water and hang them in the sunshine.

To frost over a window without darkening the room dissolve Epsom salts in hot water and paint over the window while the water is hot, then allow to dry. This is easily removed and is entirely opaque while on.

Hot soda water is an excellent cleanser for hair brushes. Rub the bristles well without bending them too much or breaking them, and dry the brush in the sun. The bristles will be white and stiff as new after such treatment.

BOY SCOUTS SAVE MILLIONS IN PROPERTY STOPPING MISCHIEF

Boys Are Trained to Have Fun Doing Useful Things Instead of Engaging in Destructive Play—The Total Amount in a Year is Estimated to Be Great.

The leaders of the Boy Scout movement of America say that the economic value of the Boy Scout activities amounts to many millions of dollars in a year. This value lies in the prevention of malicious mischief and crime among the boys growing out of the "gang" instinct and in the instruction of boys to do constructive things. Boys naturally get together in crowds, have their leaders, and plan various stunts. If the boys are extremely energetic and have any tendency towards destruction they are likely to do damage to a great amount of property.

The damage to property which boys can do was shown by the recent investigation into the police department of New York. Many police captains complain that one of the greatest difficulties with which they have to contend lies in gangs of boys. They furnished records of thousands of destructive deeds of boys. Throughout the east and west sides of the city, thousands of mischievous boys destroy fences, break windows, damage houses and do many other little things that as a whole amounts to a great deal.

One of the aims of the Boy Scout movement is to prevent this destruction of property. The leaders of the Boy Scout organization recognize the gang instinct and are seeking to develop it along proper lines. They understand that boys have lots of energy, want to have fun, and want to be busy doing things. They understand clearly that if this tendency of the boy is not turned to good use, it results in evil and mancious mischief. Accordingly, Lorillard Spencer, jr., and other workers in the local organization at New York are planning to form more troops in different parts of the city. They want to get the boys interested. They want them to engage in activities that will train them physically, and be of use to them in after life.

Throughout the country this aim of turning the energies of boys into usefulness rather than to urge the destruction of property is going on. Reports from all over the country indicate that the aim of the Boy Scout leaders is being attained. The Boy Scouts in Jersey are fighting the mosquitoes. Out in Kansas they are trying to clear off the flies. In New Hampshire and Ohio the scouts are doing everything possible to protect the birds. In almost every state in the union they are planting trees. Boys like to help the firemen and the police, and in various cities the chiefs of police, realizing that a boy's help is much better than his annoyance, are training the boys in police work and various activities. The firemen are training the boys how to act quickly in case of fire and many instances have been recorded of the catching of thieves and the saving of lives of people by Boy Scouts.

Tenderfoot Badges Shipped to Boy Scouts.

Thousands of new tenderfoot badges issued by the Boy Scouts of America have been shipped during the last week to boys throughout the country. The badges consist of the American eagle superimposed on the fleur-de-lis and are finished in gilt.

Judge Lindsey, of Denver, Colo., Calls Boy Scouts His Ideal.

Ben B. Lindsey, judge of the juvenile court of Denver, Colo., who has become famous the country over because of his enthusiastic work in behalf of boys, sees great possibilities for good in the Boy Scout movement. He is closely in touch with the Boy Scout activities in Denver and is advising the scout masters there as to the methods of handling the boys. He has observed the appeal that the activities have for the boys and has perceived how, through the spirit of fun and play, the characters of the boys can be molded. He likes the Boy Scout organization because it does not preach to the boy. It unobtrusively appeals to the boy's sense of honor.

For these reasons, Lindsey, who is a member of the national council of the Boy Scouts of America, is convinced that this still greater things can be accomplished through the organization. "I am enthusiastic," he writes, "about the Boy Scout movement. It is doing tremendous good all over the country and is just the thing that we have needed and bids fair to fulfill a dream I have had for a long time, namely, a practical scheme through which we can impart ethics and rules of moral conduct that differ from our methods of preaching that have never taken and never will take with the boys. I only wish I had the time to write an article upon what I mean, and how the Boy Scouts are taking care of the idea, that I hope can do even more than they are doing in that direction."

Requirements for Boy Scout First Aid Merit Badge.

At the suggestion of Charles Lynch, major of the medical corps of the United States army, in charge of the first aid department, the test for the merit badge of first aid to the injured has been arranged to comprise ten different phases of emergency work. Before a boy can obtain a first aid merit badge he must do the following things: Demonstrate artificial respiration, treat dislocation of the lower jaw, apply proper dressing for a fracture of the upper arm, demonstrate treatment of wound of the neck with severe arterial hemorrhage, treat injury of the leg without severe hemorrhage, apply bandage to chest, apply dressings for fracture of thigh, show what to do for rupture of varicose veins of the leg with severe hemorrhage, treat bite of finger by mad dog, demonstrate rescue of person in contact with electric wire.

Scouts Help Destroy Moths.

Edward Spanhoofd, teacher in St Paul's school, Concord, N. H., and scoutmaster registered with the Boy Scouts of America, has got the boys interested in clearing and conquering brown tail moths. He is accomplishing a double purpose: First, the Boy Scouts are proving of help to the community; secondly, they are being trained in thrift because they are making money by the work. The boys get paid $1 for every thousand nests of the moths that they gather, the insects being destroyed. Prominent citizens of Concord, who are interested in forestry, gladly have furnished the money to pay the boys and already many thousands of the moths' nests have been destroyed. "I think it is a work," writes Mr. Spanhoofd, "eminently fit for the activties of the Boy Scout patrols, as it is for the common good and affords them a legitimate way of making money necessary for their equipment. I think that one of the principles of the Boy Scout movement should be that it should be, as far as possible, self-supporting. In that case, there must be given to the patrols opportunities of making money, and I think that in a good many places in New England the gathering of brown tail moths' nests, being at once a necessary and a public-spirited work, should be easily financed in the way we hope to do in Concord. The price of $1 for 1,000 nests was found by experience just sufficient to stimulate the school children to do their work with effective enthusiasm."

The Boy Scouts of Chicago are aiding the city authorities in a fight against the tussock moth. J. H. Frost, city forester of Chicago, has made arrangements with H. H. Simmons, field secretary of the Boy Scouts of America by which the boys will be organized into a systematic search for the pests. The boys will be supplied with hand sprayer and will hunt for the insects and the cocoons on the trunks of the trees.

Boy Scouts in New Mexico Visit Indian Cliff Dwellers.

The Boy Scouts of East Las Vegas, N. M., have been doing some real scouting among the Indians in their state. Under George Fitzsimmons, their scoutmaster, twenty-three Boy Scouts, led by an Indian chief, took a trip of eleven days to visit isolated Indian pueblos and the Puye cliff dwellings. The boys camped out on their hike and spent several days among the Indians. They watched the men make pottery, grind corn, weave baskets and make necklaces. They ate with the Indians and sat around the campfire with them smoking the pipe of peace. The Indians did various dances for them and also showed them the different cliff dwellings and told them much of the law and the condition of their tribe. The experience was thoroughly novel and proved helpful to the boys.

Tenderfoot Badge Leads to Good Turn.

Monroe G. Kelly, of 179 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., scoutmaster of the Boy Scouts of America, has reported to headquarters that a tenderfoot badge was the means of doing a service to an orphan. One of the scouts in Kelly's troop was going home one evening when he was a little fellow, ragged and tired, wearing a tenderfoot badge. He instantly took an interest in him and the lad's condition aroused his sympathy. He followed the boy several blocks and saw him slip into a hallway, curl up and try to go to sleep. Then the scout went up to the tenderfoot, explained who he was, and asked if he could help him in any way. The tenderfoot proved to be an orphan from Philadelphia who had come to New York in the hope of getting a job and making his own way. The scout led the tenderfoot to a boys' lodging house, and although he himself is getting only $3 a week, he advanced money for a week's lodging for the little fellow. He related the instance to Mr. Kelly and the boy was returned to relatives in Philadelphia.

Boy Scouts Helpful in Little Things.

Boy Scouts are expected to be courteous. One of the planks of the scout law is that a boy always should be polite to women, children and old people and should never take pay for being courteous. In explanation of this plank the leaders of the Boy Scout movement say:

"Good manners, in addition to showing a spirit of general courtesy and helpfulness, will lead the scout to a number of other things just as necessary. His conduct at the table will be correct. He will not spit on the street, nor in any public place, nor lend himself to the making of any nuisance. It is always a pleasure to associate with a well bred, well mannered boy and it should be a great satisfaction to the Boy Scout to know that he is meriting the approval of those about him.

IN THE JOKESMITH SHOP.

The professor of humor rubbed his eyes sleepily, and yawned as the young gentlemen who were specializing in British humor entered the room. "Good morning, gentlemen," he said, with a yawn, when the class was seated. "As you know, we are to consider that subtle variety of humor known as 'The Merry Quip a la Punch' this morning. Mr. Hawkins, if you were commissioned by the editor of Punch to prepare a quip on a woodsman about to take out an insurance policy, just how would you put it?"

"Why—er—why, professor," said Mr. Hawkins, scratching his head, "I should have the agent advise him to make it an ax-ident policy."

"Very good, Mr. Hawkins," said the professor, wiping away a tear from his left eye. "And you, Mr. Dubbleigh—how would you work up a variation on that jest for a cabman runing along Piccadilly?"

"I'd have him call for a taxi-dent policy, sir," said Dubbleigh.

The professor frowned.

"That, sir, is an original answer, and I have repeatedly told this class that in humor we desire to cultivate not so much originality as our memories," he said. "Please bear that in mind hereafter. Mr. Wilkstaver, you may give me the form of policy to be taken out by a Piccadilly cabman in accordance with the rigid rules of this branch of humor."

"He'd ask for a hac-cident policy, sir," replied Mr. Wilkstaver.

"That is right," said the professor, putting a fresh cupful of grounds in the coffee machine. "If you were the editor of Punch, Mr. Squiggs," said the professor, reverting to his notes, "and a correspondent wrote to you to inquire the best way to open an egg, what would you reply?"

"I should say that in our best circles it is done with a knife, sir, cutting it sharply across the upper elliptical end, but that some persons in the country prefer to get a mother hen and hatch it," replied Mr. Squiggs.

The class was dismissed prematurely, for at that moment the professor fell off his chair in an attack of coma. —Harper's Weekly.

WHIPSAWED BY STEEL COMMON.

Troubles of Wall Street Speculators in This Popular Stock.

(New York Evening Post.)

All the traders believe that steel common is adroitly manipulated by a tremendous pool, whose orders are always there—orders to buy when they sell and to sell when they buy. There may be such a pool, as there has been in the past, or it may be merely that a group of very big speculators have specialized in steel common, as they have the right to do, and employ their it shrewdly. It is the only stock in which sale orders on a large scale are workable. That is true because so many traders will trade in steel common whether they like it or not. Traders out of temper, acting more upon prejudice than reason, are easy prey. The professional trading interest in steel is one-sided, which is to say, it is bearish.

Traders who devote themselves exclusively to steel common have become a quarrelsome lot. They quarrel not with each other, but with the stock. It is useless to quarrel with a stock, as everybody knows, and the more a trader quarrels with the stock upon which he subsists the worse he will trade, and yet, seeing that all the perversity of the universe has come to reside in steel common, traders cannot help it. The stock continually beats them. They cannot account for it. Never was there such a thing for getting whipsawed in. Last week one day the whole of the short interest existing in the board room was suddenly sampeded, and traders who had stood short of the stock for a long time covered at a loss around 80. That was the top. They waited for several days, wondering what had happened and then this week, on the news that a federal grand jury had been investigating the steel corporation, and was about to indict somebody, they all rushed in to sell the stock. They sold it down to 77¼, and that was the bottom. So it goes. They invariably pick out a wrong day on which to buy it, and a weak day on which to sell it, and it gets to be very painful. No other stock acts like that. One just cannot sell steel when it is strong, no more than one can buy it when it is weak.

STOGIES GET TO AN OLD PARTNER

Drive Jack Compton from Box at Dayton But Lose Game.

SCORES IN CENTRAL

Roy Montgomery and his Stogies gave an old teammate some rough treatment and a new experience for this season when they went after Jack Compton in the opening game of a double-header at Dayton and chased their old partner out of the box.

At the same time the Wheeling crew came from behind and picked off a couple of runs that knotted up the count and held as good as a tie to the ninth when Elmer Benson plinked one of the Hardy shoots for a drive over the fence. This scored the winning run.

In the course of the engagement there were four home runs and in the second game of the double bill two were registered, making six for the afternoon. Wheeling was beaten in both of the games.

At the flag raising ceremonies in South Bend Markham was batted from the box in the fourth inning after four runs had been scored against him and the champs had little trouble winning seven to four. Myers started for South Bend but was hooked when Evansville looked dangerous. The fielding of the Evas was ragged.

Jack Pendry and his Newark hustlers trimmed the Tots in good shape and the battle was featured by a steal home with the doughty Kitty manager in the star role. The score:

First game—	R.	H.	E.
Dayton [illegible]	5	8	2
Wheeling [illegible]	4	9	1

Batteries—Compton Winchell and Rohrer; Hardy and Welcher.

NOTES OF THE AMATEURS

At Paulding the Fort Wayne White Sox were beaten six to one. McCoy had bad inning.

The Young Allstiens beat the Young Pirates on the Western Gas construction grounds by a score of 17 to 6.

The Browns defeated the Tigers yesterday by a score of 15 to 6. Batteries—Fink and Elnsidel; Smith and Henline.

The Fort Wayne Royals won from the Zulu Grays by a score of 2 to 1. Miller and Oberwerker for the Royals.

The Fort Wayne Senecas lost a well played and closely contested game to South Whitley at the latter place yesterday afternoon by a score of 4 to 2.

CLEARY WANTS A CHANCE AT COOK

Will Have Him Here for a Game and Will Try to Get Even.

KENDALLVILLE LUCK

Mart Cleary wants revenge on Pitcher Cook and he thinks he will get it next Sunday as the Toledo hurler will be here with the Kendallville team to play the second game of the series arranged between the Shamrocks and the club that has given all northern Indiana trouble this season.

Cook and his Kendallville supporters had all the luck in the game yesterday. The Shamrocks got as many hits off him as Kendallville did off Hewes and there was no difference in the fielding records, but the luck all broke against Mart Cleary's crew and the game went to the enemy, four to nothing. The score:

He is Trying to Arrange a Battle for Walsh With Wolgast.

TO CONFER AGAIN

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—Ad Wolgast, champion lightweight of the world, and Fred Welsh, Great Britain's contender for that title, will probably fight for the honor and a side bet of $10,000 in some arena on the coast on Labor day. After a heated colloquy, which ended in disagreement, the principals and their managers met again at Venice last night, and on Welsh's exhibition of a cablegram from his backer, Harry Marks, of Cardiff, Wales, that the amount of the bet had been mailed. Wolgast and his manager, Tom Jones, tacitly agreed that the bout would take place, with either Jack Welsh or Eddie Smith as referee.

At the first meeting Welsh and his manager, Baron Long, asked Wolgast to live up to their original agreement, which was that the money be posted thirty days before the fight. Wolgast refused, stating that if the $10,000 was not posted he would withdraw his forfeit of $1,000 and leave for the east.

Welsh and Wolgast will meet again and endeavor to reach an agreement.

ONE BAD INNING LOST THE FIGHT

Ragged Support Almost Beat Rogers in the Sunday Tilt.

RAIDY'S CRABS WIN

Eliminating the sixth round of the Sabbath tilt with Joe Raidy and his crabs, Edward Pfeffer, late of the St. Louis Browns, gave a pretty fair account of himself, but in this one inning his repertoire was all shot to pieces by an attack that netted one triple, two doubles, a single, a hit batsman, a pass and a cluster of tallies that effectually stowed the combat for the bridegrooms.

In this same connection it might be worthy of note that six of the eight hits negotiated by the enemy during the conflict were for extra bases—five doubles and one triple. There is little wonder that members of Dr. F. R. Carson's umpire staff had as soon officiate ten days in the Mephisto league as five in Zanesville.

From Joe Raidy on down the line the club carries an aggregation of the most unreasonable kickers and batters that ever any league was cursed with and an incident of the pastimes yesterday just goes to show to what extremes the men go. One DeGroff, St. Paul catoff, who has done nothing more worthy of note than to get a lump in his throat and strike out three or four times with the bases full, stopped on his way in from the field between innings to get in a kick.

He had nothing to kick about as he had popped once and taken three swings another time, but he felt it his bounden duty to give the umpire a little advice in order to keep in line with the rest of his crowd. Rogers pitched good ball, but the shortcomings of his support most defeated him. Two hits were recorded against him that should have been easy outs and Joe Raidy and Ned Crowder, between them, almost tossed the victory to the home squad with their erratic throwing and bad fielding.

Things broke bad for Pfeffer from the start. Wratten hit a drive to left that should have been a putout by Keener, who came in on instead of going back, and the error of judgment allowed the ball to roll to the fence for a two base hit on which a run was finally scored. In the sixth McLafferty had plenty of time to have nipped Farrell on DeGroff's sacrifice, but he whizzed the ball to first instead of stepping back and bagging the runner and this run was the first of five that gave the Raiders a victory.

Rogers had two untoward happenings, one of which netted a run while the other did no particular damage. In the fourth Vandagrift popped a fly that Joe Raidy went after and lost in the sun and in the fifth DeGroff and Farrell allowed Keener's fly to drop between them.

Rogers was never in any more danger than grew out of his bad support, except in the sixth inning, when Vandagrift opened with a single to left, Onslow hit to right and Pfeffer drove to center, scoring one run. Blount bunted and moved base runners to second and third, but neither Justice or Keener could send them over.

Notes of the Game.

Poor fielding allowed Ragsdale's drive to go for three bases. Blount went up the bank after it and it got away from him and hit the fence. Young was slow getting over to help out and the ball rolled down and back into the field before it was finally recovered.

Hillinger could not connect. He scored a run with a sacrifice fly in the first and struck out twice in five times up.

Blake got a bad rap on the wrist in the sixth, but it did not affect his throwing. He made a nice play in the ninth when he caught Justice at second on Keener's grounder and he raced back to the bag for a double play, but could not complete it.

In the eighth inning every man up drove at Rogers and was retired at first by the pitcher.

Over $1,450,000 was deposited in naval savings banks of England during 1910.

CHANGE HAS NOT BEEN ANNOUNCED

Fort Wayne Will Go to South Bend for Next Three Days.

ANNIS SAYS LITTLE.

Late today neither Manager Casey or Secretary Bert Dennis had received any orders to go to Grand Rapids for the series scheduled at South Bend tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday and it is supposed these games will be played on the South Bend grounds as there has been no official announcement of the transfer of the Champs to other diggings.

Annis has little to say about the matter and it is generally believed that he has all his plans made but is afraid he will hurt the small attendance in his home town by making positive announcement of the change.

Tomorrow there will be a meeting of the directors of the Southern Michigan league at which the question of taking the South Bend territory will be discussed and if Annis abandons it there is every probability that the Benders will have class D ball from Thursday to the close of the season.

The territory at Grand Rapids must be occupied and the occupation must take place in a short time or else some other league will be in there, although it is not likely the city would support either the Michigan State or the Southern Michigan, both of which are seeking it. Annis is quoted as saying:

"I can state nothing definite yet. I was in Grand Rapids yesterday looking over affairs, but could not place my hands on the strings which if pulled would close the deal. If I find the situation in Grand Rapids favorable, I may take the club there next week."

LITTLE BITS OF SPORT CHATTER

Montgomery has a new outfielder named Collins who said he once played ball in Fort Wayne. He worked in both the double-headers at Dayton.

Mike Konnick, who had a finger banged up here, and who is out of the game, has been called to Wilkesbarre, Pa., by the illness of his mother.

A Dayton fan wants all the players numbered and corresponding numbers put on the score card, so they can be distinguished when they come to bat.

Grover Cleveland Alexander started in the game as an outfielder and was put in the box to pitch one day when the regular hurler was soused. His work got him a berth in the box.

At the flag raising in South Bend yesterday there were present Aggie Grant who tried six years to win a pennant, Eddie Wheeler who won one and Ed Smith, who expects to win one.

The fickleness of the average baseball fan was demonstrated Saturday night when kicks were registered that Dayton had purposely lost two games to Wheeling Saturday to get a big Sunday crowd.

Harry Davis, the captain of the Athletics, predicts that Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals will win the National league pennant. He says the Cards are playing the best and most consistent ball in the older circuit and they will make a victorious rush down the home stretch.

Louis D. Smith went from Terre Haute Saturday to see his team play at Newark on Sunday and today he went out on a scouting trip to dig up some new players. He says he is satisfied with the way John Somerlott runs his club.

The work of McInnes through the recent series in New York was sensational. Filling in for Harry Davis at first, the peppery little infielder played phenomenal ball at every turn. He looks to be one of the grandest ball players of the present age wherever used.

Most players enthusiastically approve Ban Johnson's stand that the season should start no earlier than May 1. They declare that the southern trips, as now arranged are spoiled and rendered useless by the exposure of the players to the winds and rains of April, and that the athletes, in most cases, are in poorer condition on May 1 than they were when they started south in March.

Heretofore Philadelphia has found it a very difficult task to bat the New York pitchers with any degree of success. This season they have been hammering them right along. Mathewson has been pounded for keeps in almost every game in which he has pitched against Philadelphia, and yet Mathewson is pitching about as well this year year as he ever did.

THE GHOSTS OF FORSAKEN SPOT

Vision of Italian Laborer Brings Back to Mind the Graveyard on Johnson's Island in Lake Erie.

Nicola Rocci, one of a gang of Italian quarrymen on Johnson's island, has seen ghosts in the cemetery where rebel prisoners were buried in that isolated Lake Erie prison famous during the civil war, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Shortly after 10 o'clock at night in a terrible March storm, Rocci and several other workmen picked their way through the cemetery gripping the trees so as not to be overcome by the wind, and stumbling every moment over one of the white headstones. At last they arrived at the great statue of the confederate soldier, holding the rebel flag and peering toward the south. They took refuge behind this.

It was bitterly cold and soon Rocci began to feel numb. Suddenly he heard the sound of a bugle blowing somewhere in the distance. The shrill notes seemed to ride on the wind and the tones seemed to come from somewhere out of the lake.

Rocci jumped to his feet. His companions followed him, for it seemed that the confederate soldier moved and turned about so as to face the graves of the dead southerners. Then in the long grass there was a rustling sound and a small army of men, some of them with hollow cheeks, some in fine gray uniforms, some in rags, some handsome and others showing the marks of suffering on their faces, walked slowly but in good order across the cemetery as if in answer to the battle cry.

Rocci claims that the rebel flag was unfurled; that above the wind he distinctly heard moans and in another moment all was still again. The workmen hurried to the windswept field where were located their shacks and waited for morning to break. It was two days before they were able to reach Sandusky.

Was it a delusion? Science will prove that it was nothing more nor less than that, and common sense will say that the men were frightened and overcome by exposure.

But whether or not Nicola Rocci saw the ghosts of the departed confederate officers, the fact remains that the spirit of the south still finds a home on the old island. It is the only place in the north where confederacy still lives and the rebel spirit is kept alive. The old prison where 15,000 southern officers were held has fallen into ruins. The quarry workmen have kept hacking away at them for their timbers until now there is very little of the old buildings left. The federal troops left no landmark, but that one acre of ground where sleep the southern officers is kept green and always will be kept green while Dixieland is populated. Strangest of all is the rebel monument which stands at the southern end of the little graveyard.

Picturesque Old Spot.

The graveyard is located on the west edge of the island within a few feet of the shore line. It is entirely surrounded by a grove of great oak trees, and itself is the center of a sparse wood. Each of the 206 graves is marked by a simple white headstone. Lieutenant McBride, of Tennessee, lies next to Captain King, of Georgia. Alabama, Virginia, Mississippi, Florida, North Carolina and all the states of the confederacy gave its young men to populate the little cemetery.

To the west of the cemetery is an open meadow, now used by the laborers as a garden, where truck is raised. Then come the grounds where the prisoners were kept in long low barracks, surrounded by a stockade along which cannon were mounted and sentries stood guard.

This ground has been taken possession of by the Italian workmen and the old prison is now used as a tenement. A number of laborers live in the officers' quarters, a rambling wooden house partly in ruins and showing the marks of Lake Erie's gales.

The old stockade, likewise weather beaten, is used by the workmen as a club house. Here they sit around a fire during the long cold evenings, play cards and tell stories. Close to the shore of the bay is the little chapel where the prisoners formerly attended Sunday morning service presided over by a southern preacher. This is likewise utilized by the workmen.

The powder magazine, which was built of stone, is now falling into ruins, but the blockhouse of wood a short distance away is in such a good state of preservation that it is used as a cow stable.

In spite of the sound of the drill and the sledge, which now echo across the old island, it still looks warlike. Breastworks many feet high still stand, and with the military buildings to be seen on every side recall the days of the war to the veteran.

Johnson's Island during the civil war was looked upon as the safest and best of all the northern military prisons. Its buildings were designed only for confederate officers and during the war 15,000 of them were confined there. Some of them weakened by battle died while being held in the barracks and in that event their comrades would fashion a rude wooden marker for the grave and bury him without much ceremony. Pneumonia during the long winters carried off many of the young officers, until it was said in Dixieland that the flower of the south was buried on Johnson's Island, Sandusky bay.

When the war was over and the prisoners were liberated the island lost its military bearing and for years it stood out in the bay deserted, occupied by nothing but the dead southerners. Occasionally a mother, a daughter or a sweetheart would come up from the south and make a pilgrimage to the grave of a loved one.

The north gradually forgot the old prison on Johnson's Island, but the south never forgot its dead and a short time ago the graveyard was cleared of its tangle of grass and dense undergrowth. Then patriotic Georgia men and women furnished headstones and erected a monument on the lonely little island to the memory of the dead patriots.

Workmen on the island listened to the story of their companions with a great deal of doubt. During the day the sun shines through the trees and nothing is to be seen but a simple little cemetery with very plain headstones.

"They're dead, and have been so these many years," said the foreman in reassuring his crew. "There's nothing to fear from that quarter. If you were as safe in the quarry when the blast is on as you are beside them dead rebel soldiers I wouldn't be worrying a bit."

But, nevertheless, Nicola Rocci and his companions never went back to the island.

It will only be a matter of a few years when all the old prison buildings will have disappeared from Johnson's island. The symbol of the one time strength of the north will disappear with them forever. But those little white headstones will stand for generations to recall the valor of the boys in gray who fought for a lost cause and who died and were buried on the soil of the enemy.

Veterans of the north are interested in a movement to set aside the little cemetery and make of it a permanent park, and the veterans of the south are waiting to work hand in hand with them in the same enterprise.

Notice to Contractors.

W. R. ROBERTS HAS RESIGNED

Retires from Position on Wabash on Account of Health.

PENNSYLVANIA AT ST. LOUIS

Big Railway Concern Goes West of Mississippi for Business.

W. R. Roberts, well known here, has resigned as chief clerk to the Wabash general foreman at Delray, a suburb of Detroit, on account of ill health. He will go to Denver, Co. and may make that his future home. Mr. Roberts has been with the Wabash several years and for a part of that time was General Foreman Henry Eisele's clerk at the Fort Wayne shops. S. Laird, of St. Thomas, Ont., has been selected as Mr. Roberts' successor and Chief Clerk Perry A. Thompson, of the master mechanic's office, went to Detroit this morning to install him.

SIGNED WAGE AGREEMENT.

Iron Workers and Mill Owners Get Together.

As predicted a week ago by The Sentinel, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers and Bar Iron association have agreed upon the wage scale for the 1911-1912 year and the same was signed last Friday. The scale is practically the same as the last one. This agreement affects nine mills, located respectively in Fort Wayne, Cleveland, New Albany, Terre Haute, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Madison and Vincennes. William F. Hormberger represented the local union of the Amalgamated association, No. 17, and he returned home Saturday evening from Cambridge Springs, Ohio, where the meeting of the bar association and the iron workers was held.

LABOR DAY CELEBRATION.

Fort Wayne Federation of Labor to Discuss It.

The meeting of the Fort Wayne Federation of Labor this evening will be important because the celebration of Labor day will come up for discussion with a view of formulating or outlining a program. It is proposed to have some of the leading labor orators present and a list of possible ones will be present from which to make a selection. President James M. Lynch, of the Typographical union, and President William D. Mahon, of the Amalgamated Association of Street Car Men, have replied to an inquiry that they had already been engaged for that day and could not come to Fort Wayne. There will also be some other important business before the meeting this evening.

PENNSY EXPANDING.

Opens Its Big Freight Station in St. Louis.

The Pennsylvania has opened a freight station on the Missouri side of the Mississippi river in St. Louis. It is located between Main and Second streets, extending from O'Fallon street north two blocks to Cass avenue, a location that is especially convenient to the wholesale, retail and produce districts of St. Louis. The station is 700x60 feet, with team tracks for car load delivery and has a capacity of sixty cars. The company also announces that it will continue to receive and deliver car load and less than car load freight for the Vandalia railroad at the terminal in East St. Louis, Ill., heretofore the only terminal in St. Louis. The foregoing facts are illustrated in a circular map, which also shows the routes of the Pennsylvania fast freight lines and gives the time in transit between St. Louis and the various large cities east of the Mississippi river.

ABLUTIONS UNDER BAN.

A study of collisions and wrecks led the Harriman system officials to believe that the trainmen were responsible for them because of a desire to enter terminals with clean hands and face, ready to turn the train over to the yard force and immediately leave for their homes. While some distance from the terminals, the men relax vigilance and "wash up" and collisions result as a consequence of their abandonment of duty. This has led to an order putting a ban upon ablutions until the train reaches the terminal and the man who gets off the caboose with clean hands and face and wearing his "store" clothes is liable to dismissal.

HERE TO ASSIST IN TESTS.

T. L. Bailey, road foreman of engines of the Erie and Ashtabula division of the Pennsylvania, is here on invitation of Motive Power Superintendent T. W. Demarest to assist in the tests between engines 7514 and 9999 now on. No. 7514 has been equipped with a superheater and the test is in part to determine the merits of an engine so equipped over the same class of engine which has no superheater. Mr. Bailey will be here two or three days. He was associate with Supt. W. M. Wardrop in railroad work at New Castle several years, Mr. Wardrop being assistant trainmaster of the E. and A. at that time.

SHOPMEN GET WAGE INCREASE.

August 15 an order increasing the wages of the 8,000 men in the mechanical department of the Louisville and Nashville road 5 per cent becomes effective. The L. & N. also proposes a pension system similar to that of the Pennsylvania and a vote of the employes for the purpose of learning their sentiments on the proposition is to be taken soon. Several former Fort Wayne men are now employed on the L. & N. George Depner, for several years in the Pennsylvania machine shop, is a foreman of one of the shops of the company.

INSPECTION THIS WEEK.

Superintendent W. M. Wardrop and his staff officers of the Pennsylvania will make their monthly inspection trips over the division next Thursday and Monday. The trip from this city to Crestline will be made Thursday and the trip over the western end of the division will be made Monday, on account of the equipment being needed in Chicago Tuesday morning to take the paymaster over the line. He is due in Fort Wayne Wednesday, the 19th.

FIRST TIME IN 12 YEARS.

E. O. Miller, Pennsylvania engineer, is undergoing a new experience. For twelve years he has been employed as a fireman and later engineer on the Pennsylvania and until yesterday had not been off duty on account of accident or sickness, a record that none other can show. Saturday Engineer Miller got the second finger of his right hand mixed up with a wrench in action and the second joint of the digit was dislocated. He will be unable to work for a few days.

JOHN J. DISSER MAKES CHANGE.

John J. Disser, whose resignation as assistant fuel clerk at the Pennsylvania motive power office was mentioned by The Sentinel a week ago, severed his connection with the company this morning and immediately took up his new duties with the German American bank. The vacated position at the motive power office has not yet been filled, Chief Clerk W. L. Wilt being out of the city.

HAD UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCE.

Engineers Simons, Kruse and Mooney, of the Pennsylvania, have returned from an outing at Crooked lake, which was not a real success in a pleasurable way. During their stay there each had two or more days of sickness, each had his arms blistered by the sun's sweltering rays and they had to buy fish occasionally to piece out the meals. This is the tale their fellow yardmen relate.

ELEVATION TO BE RESUMED.

The pile driver and a force of operators will commence work at Union street on the Pennsylvania tomorrow morning and Wednesday morning elevation will be taken up at Broadway. It is proposed to push the work at both streets and they will not be closed, it is said, over six weeks.

THANKS CAPTAIN STOLL.

A letter from Chief of Police Dayton P. Abbott carried to Capt. H. C. Stoll, of the Pennsylvania police department, the thanks of the city official for the valuable assistance given in the location and capture of Raffaela Mastrianio, who shot and killed Yonia in this city last week.

FROM SHOP TO FARM.

S. Van Horn resigned his position at the Pennsylvania erecting shop this morning and will soon move his family upon a small farm recently purchased just south of the St. Mary's river, four miles from the city. Mr. Van Horn has been crane director in the erecting shop for about a year.

ERIE SHOPS BUSY

John Otis is here to inspect car wheels and car castings for the Erie. Mr. Otis says the shops in Huntington are being operated on the high pressure system at present, in view of a heavy traffic in grain and other freights soon. The car shops are working over time.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

T. W. Demarest and W. L. Will are in Pittsburg today on business for the Pennsylvania.

E. B. Bultemeyer, H. S. Thibaut and J. McBish, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty.

A. Barkas, a painter at the Pennsylvania shops, and his family are at Rome City to stay all week.

Miss Florence Bloemke, employed at the Fort Wayne Electric works, has returned from a week's outing at Rome City.

Pennsylvania Conductor J. L. Archibald is off duty as the result of injuries, which are not supposed to be serious.

Oscar G. Ankenbruck, clerk in the Pennsylvania superintendent's office, entered upon a two weeks' vacation today.

After an illness of a week, Machinist William Lerch resumed charge of his planer in the Pennsylvania shops this morning.

W. W. Adams, the brass moulder at the Pennsylvania machine shop, has recovered from his recent illness and is back on duty.

William Schwartz has returned to duty at the issue department of the Fort Wayne Electric works, after a week at the lakes.

G. Vasil, a machinist's helper in the Pennsylvania erecting shop for two years, resigned this morning to take another position.

Machinist W. H. Smith, of the Pennsylvania shops, was at Hesse Cassel yesterday, visiting his brother, Henry Smith, who is in poor health.

Division Passenger Agent W. H. Shorey, of the Wabash, is on the Detroit end of his territory today for the first time since his appointment.

E. J. Loney, who was with his family at Twin Lakes a week, and J. H. Kamm, who was sick a week, resumed work at the Pennsylvania copper shop this morning.

C. W. Grosvenor, gang foreman in the Pennsylvania machine shop, was the guest of Ed Rohan in Chicago over Sunday. Mr. Rohan formerly resided in Fort Wayne.

Jerome Werstein, clerk for Foreman Martin Braun, at the Bass boiler shop, is suffering from an affection of the eyes, as a result of the heat of the past two weeks.

H. W. G. Heine has gone to Valparaiso to look after the boiler work in the Pennsylvania shops in place of the foreman, who has taken a two weeks' lay off.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Downey, of 333 Masterson avenue, left Saturday for Blackstone, Va., where they will visit relatives three weeks. Mr. Downey is a Pennsylvania engineer.

W. A. Heidrich, Pennsylvania stationary engineer, resumed work this morning. He was married three weeks ago and with his bride made a trip through Missouri, Kansas and Illinois.

George Hermans, Dennis Conners and Charles Shoup, who had been off duty some time, resumed their duties in the Pennsylvania shops this morning. Mr. Hermans had been at the lakes.

Machinist Michael Shea and his bride have completed a wedding trip and this morning he reported for work at the Pennsylvania shops. The couple made a trip through Nebraska and Kansas.

C. Kadbaum, of the lamp department of the Electrical works, has taken a six weeks' leave of absence, which he will spend in Denver, Col. His duties at the shop will be looked after by Carl Kronmiller.

It is said that L. J. Ferritor, well known in railway circles in Indiana, is to be the general superintendent of the Alton and Clover Leaf roads under the reorganization plans. Mr. Ferritor was division superintendent of the Wabash several years.

Blacksmith H. Limbach and his two sons, Herman and Harry, all employed at the Pennsylvania shops, reported for work this morning. They were at Rome City last week. Blacksmith C. Bruns also reported for duty this morning. He was injured two weeks ago.

WHY DOES BABY CRY?

Mothers Should Learn the Language of Infant Plants.

(Youth's Companion.)

It is astonishing to observe how little imaginative insight most women bring to bear upon the crying of small infants.

The instructed modern woman knows that all babies must and will cry to some extent, and that it is a normal and healthy form of expression. At the same time, and this is but natural, it is much easier to apply this theory to some other woman's baby. A human mother, whatever her theories, does not like to hear her own baby cry much. Although her beliefs are modern, her uneasiness is distinctly primitive. Crying is crying, and she does not take pains to learn the "language of a cry;" therefore, the crying baby is either fed, or rocked, or searched for a safety pin.

This is not sympathetic treatment. A baby has a multitude of reasons for expressing distress, and is quite clever enough to vary its crying according to its reason. If adults were forcibly fed, or violently jounced up and down, or stripped and searched every time they grumbled, this would be a bad world to live in. Yet this is the treatment meted out to small babies who cannot talk back, or thump the table, or go out and bang the door.

It is the duty of each mother to study her baby's cry as if it were a little foreign language. It is true, she will soon hear the cry which says, "Isn't it about feeding time?" and the one that says, "I wish you would be more careful when you dress me," and the one that simply calls for human companionship; but she will also hear and learn to recognize many others.

The cry for food usually begins as a sort of fretful, peevish whimper, soon rising, as the baby's sense of outrage grows, to a loud, angry protest; but this cry is not in place except at meal times. Sometimes it means that a very smart baby is trying to enforce its will in spite of rules. In such a case the rules must of course, be kept, but it is only fair to see if thirst is the trouble. A baby has just as much right to a drink of water as anyone else, and the drink is just as good for it.

Fretful crying with restlessness at sleeping time generally means overfeeding; the baby is suffering from indigestion, and more food is not likely to be the remedy.

A loud cry, accompanied with squirming and drawing up of the legs, means some sort of pain in the abdomen, and no one could take the explosive cry of anger or fright for anything but what it is.

An incessant little "worrying" whimper often means fatigue and sleeplessness. "Don't try to entertain me—just lay me down and shade the light."

Make a study of this little language, and save both yourself and your baby much wear and tear.

ATLANTA'S COATLESS CAMPAIGN

R. E. Lee, who started a campaign some days ago to make men discard their coats during the summer, contends that men can go without coats and not offend decency, and says that he has discussed this question with all classes and sizes, and that 90 per cent favor retiring the coat to moth balls and cedar chests. The other 10 per cent., Mr. Lee says, are either the ones who wear one shirt all the week or their forms are a little awkward. In the latter case, says Mr. Lee, they deserve more sympathy than censure.

Among other indorsements Mr. Lee has received the following letter, the writer calling herself "An old style woman."

In part she says, "Let men go without their coats if they wish to. Take women certainly cannot offer a kick for they wear as few clothes as the laws of decency will permit. I venture to say any man in Atlanta will compare favorably in shape to the average woman we see on dress parade."

YOUNG HAVEMEYER.

How Sugar Magnate's Heir Impressed Washington.

That a young man of twenty-five should leave a distinct impression of his personality upon an investigating committee composed of experienced congressmen is somewhat unusual, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Yet no member of the committee now engaged in probing the affairs of the sugar trust and other concerns in the refining business, will soon forget the two days' session with Horace Havemeyer on the stand. It was not merely his practical knowledge of the business, nor his familiarity with high finance that caused surprise, but it was in addition, his skill as an adroit witness, his assurance of his ability to parry questions which he did not like.

Mr. Havemeyer is a clean-cut young man who dresses well and whose appearance would excite no more than ordinary attention. He is about five feet ten inches in height, well built, with light hair and blue eyes. His face is round and well tanned. He has been in the sugar business since he was seventeen years old, having worked on the docks for two years as an employe of the American Sugar Refining company, but receiving no salary during that time. Later he went through other branches of the business, and at twenty-one was a director in the company. Now he is seeking, partly with the aid of the millions which his father left him, to gain control of the National Sugar Refining company and give battle to the trust of which his father was once the head.

"I may seem to be splitting hairs in answering some of your questions," Mr. Havemeyer told the committee. "I want to say in explanation that I am not a lawyer, neither am I a college graduate. But I have been mixed up in litigation all my life, it seems to me, and it is a sort of second nature to me."

The only trace of boyishness that Mr. Havemeyer showed during his session with the committee was when after leaving the witness stand, he asked his lawyer how he had made out. After the first day's session with the young millionaire, Chairman Hardwick, of the committee, remarked to one of his colleagues:

BOWSER'S FARM.

He Decides He Will Lead the Simple Life.

ENCOURAGED BY HIS WIFE.

She Starts Him Out Early to Select a Country Place, and the Farmer Gives Him Some Lessons In Agriculture. He Blames His Wife For the Trouble.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.]

MR. BOWSER had a communication to make. Mrs. Bowser knew it by the way he hitched around in his chair for awhile and then got up and paced the floor. At last he said:

"I am going to the country tomorrow."

"Yes?" was the answer.

"It's the call of the wild for me, and I can't stand it any longer. Mrs. Bowser, I must be out in the fresh air—in the sunshine—among the lowing kine and the singing birds. I was cut out for a farmer, and I should never have left the farm."

"And you want to buy a farm?" she asked.

"If I can find one to suit. I've been told of a farm that I'm going out tomorrow to look at."

At this point he expected Mrs. Bowser to begin her arguments and protestations, and he was prepared to shout "Woman!" at her and bluff her down. To his great surprise she quietly replied:

"No, you should never have left the old farm. As a farmer you would have been content and a success. You would at this age be in the most rugged health, instead of being an invalid. It isn't too late yet, however."

"Do—do you consider me a wreck?" he asked somewhat anxiously.

Has Many Complaints.

"Well, perhaps not as bad as that, but you know that you have weak

ANSWERS CALL OF THE WILD.

"I don't know any such thing!" he fired back, and then, recollecting that he had brought forward the state of his health on numerous occasions, he added:

"That is, I think there is a slight improvement in my general condition."

"I hope so, but we must not trust to what you think. You must get out on a farm. You must have the sunshine and exercise. Six months of outdoor life will make a new man of you. Do you wish to start at an early hour in the morning?"

"I—I may not go at all."

"But I hope you will and that you will like the farm and buy it. I am ready to pack up and move any day."

"But last year about this time you called me a chump for even thinking about such a thing."

"Did I? Well, your liver had not enlarged then."

He couldn't say that it hadn't since, for it was only ten days since he had brought home a remedy for it that a druggist had made 200 per cent profit on.

"There'll be lots of work for you," he finally said.

"But I'll get through with it, never fear. I'm a strong and healthy woman, and I like work. I'll milk, feed the pigs and chickens, cook and wash and iron, and if I get any spare time I'll help you plow and plant. I hope you come back tomorrow night and say that we are to move in a week."

Called Early In the Morning.

Mr. Bowser sat down and picked up his paper again. It was too easy, and he couldn't understand it. He didn't think half so much of the sunshine and singing birds as if Mrs. Bowser had advanced a hundred arguments against them. He was still in a puzzle when he went to bed, and when he was aroused an hour before his usual time he would have given the thing up but for the saving of his "face." He had said that he was going, and now he must go.

Mrs. Bowser assisted the cook to hustle on his breakfast, and as he was eating it she said:

"I think you are looking better even at the thought of it. Don't try to beat the farmer down on his price or find too much fault. You know we must have a farm. Your life is at stake in this matter."

"I don't see it that way," he rather sulkily replied.

"Well, get the farm. Get it at most any figure. I believe I will pack some of the things today."

"I shan't buy a pig in a poke."

"No, but you are farmer enough to tell what sort of a farm it is by casting your eye over it. You know all about soils and rotation of crops. The farmer may try to fool you, but he can't. Come, dear; don't be late for your train. If the farmer has a telephone and you choose the deal let me know. I shall be on the anxious seat all day."

Quizzed by the Farmer.

Mr. Bowser went out with a growl to himself. When he reached the corner he was almost minded to take the car for the office. He fought the idea back, however, and went the other way and took the train. In an hour he was at the farm to whose owner he had a letter from a broker.

The farmer was tall and stout and sunburned. He looked as if a week's hard work wouldn't tire him. He also looked with something like contempt on Mr. Bowser.

"You are a farmer, are you?" he asked.

"Oh, yes—that is, I was born on a farm."

"Umph! I don't know that it would help a country pig much if he was born in the city! Used to getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning?"

"Well, no, but I can get used to it."

"You know how to milk, of course?"

"I know you have got to sit down to the cow."

"On which side?"

"I'll have to learn that."

"What crops have you ever raised?"

Learns About Plowing.

"Why, I can't remember; but, of course, I shall go in for general farming."

"Umph! You know how to plow, of course?"

"I used to see father hold the plow. It's not much of a trick, is it?"

"Oh, no. All you have to do is to stick the point in the ground and then follow after with a silk umbrella over your head. That's my cornfield over there. Just finished planting a week ago. How many kernels did your father used to plant in a hill?"

"About a hundred, I believe. I remember I used to drop the kernels and he covered them up."

"Exactly! Ever split fence rails?"

"I don't think so."

"Ever drive a mower or reaper?"

"I can't remember."

"Ever kill and dress a hog?"

"I was a little too young, I guess."

"Yes, guess you was!" said the farmer as he rose up from the veranda, where they had been sitting. "My horses are out there, hitched to a plow. Come out and take hold."

Gets a Practical Lesson.

Mr. Bowser hesitated, but couldn't back out. He took off his coat and vest, got the horses headed for the opposite fence and then gave a chirp. The horses went ahead, but he went sideways. His heels dragged one moment and cracked together in the air the next. Then he lost his hold on the plow handles and went over a stump and knew no more for ten minutes. Bowser the farmer had been flopped. He came to with both suspenders busted and a bruise as big as a dishpan on his hip.

At 6 o'clock that evening Mrs. Bowser and the cat were on the front steps watching. They saw a limping, discouraged figure get off the car with an effort. That figure limped down to them and up the steps.

"Oh, you've bought the farm—I know you have!" cried Mrs. Bowser as she clapped her hands.

"Farm! Buy a farm!" shouted the man of the plow as he woke up a bit. "You go in and telephone our respective lawyers that we want a divorce before tomorrow noon! Don't think I don't know the she fiend who brought all this about!"

And Farmer Bowser was Farmer Bowser no more.

The Treatment Helped Some.

"Let me kiss those tears away," he begged tenderly.

She fell into his arms, and he was busy for the next few minutes. And yet the tears flowed on.

"Can nothing stop them?" he asked breathlessly.

"No," she murmured; "it is hay fever, you know. But go on with the treatment."—Silent Partner.

PROMINENT MAN IS UNDER ARREST

Frank J. Vinson, Indianapolis, Held on Charges of Embezzlement.

CRIMPED BIG HOUSE

Indianapolis, July 10.—Frank J. Vinson, former director of the Columbia club which entertained President Taft last Tuesday, and auditor of the Brown-Ketcham Iron works, of this city, last night surrendered to the police after a warrant, charging him with the embezzlement of $4,460 from the iron works company, had been issued. It is said the total shortage will amount to $56,000. Vinson left a wife seriously ill and said to be dying from heart disease to give himself up. He was released later on $2,500 bond.

The alleged defalcations were discovered when the company went into the hands of the receivers lately and expert accountants were put on the books of the company. The defalcations are said to have extended over a period of eight years. Vinson, it was said last night, had been confronted with the alleged shortage last Friday and had confessed, but was not arrested then on account of the condition of his wife. It was feared the disclosures would hasten her death. She has not been told of her husband's plight.

Vinson, when seen before surrendering to the police and told the story of the alleged defalcation as coming from Frank D. Stalnaker, president of the Capital National bank of this city and receiver for the Brown-Ketcham company, said:

"Well, if the receiver told you, I guess you know it all." Further than that he made no statement. While the alleged defalcation may have helped, it was said last night that it alone was not responsible for the company going into receivers' hands.

Vinson, who is 48 years old, was regarded as one of the leading business men of the city. His home is at 359 Westdrive, Woodruff place, and he has a family. The Brown-Ketcham company manufactures structural iron work. William H. Brown is president and John L. Ketcham is secretary-treasurer. Both live here but made no statement.

WHY THE WRITERS SPAT.

Many are the Causes of Incompatibility of Literary Persons.

Andrew Lang says that the reason literary characters are often unhappy in marriage is that theirs is a home industry and they and their wives see too much of each other, says an editorial in Scribner's. The Carlyles rise to the front as a rueful instance; the Grotes more humorously. "I like Mr. Grote," exclaimed Sydney Smith; "he's no ladylike; and I like her, she's such a perfect gentleman!" Jenny Lind compared the historian to a fine old bust in a corner which one longed to dust. "And," commented Hare, "Mrs. Grote dusted him!"

More aggressive in defense was the Rev. R. C. Maturin, who, when in the throes of composition, would be seen with a red wafer stuck on his forehead, a sign to his wife and numerous family that he was not to be spoken to. That the home industry is not, however, the sole cause of conjugal ennui is suggested by the famous letter of the French wife: "I am writing to you because I do not know what to do, and I am ending my letter because I do not know what to say."

The traffic in kind speeches and occasional sips from the chalice prepared for other lips are potent factors in the pleasantness of married life. When Harm Jan Huidekoper and his wife added up the same column of figures to see if the results corresponded and they would sometimes differ, he would always say, "Dear, I must have made a mistake." Less tact was shown by the autograph collector who, perceiving that the house was on fire, scrambled out of bed crying to his wife, "You save the children and I will save the autographs." Obviously, if an important thing is to be done one should do it oneself.

Wordsworth on one occasion, when talking to his wife, referred to a time when "as you know, I was better looking." "But, my dear," replied she, "you were always very ugly."

Lady Pacre on her eighty-third birthday wrote to her granddaughter: "I do assure you that, if I had been a lovely young bride striking 19, more affectionate and gratifying speeches could not have flown from my bridegroom's lips of 23. I am so little worthy of it. It belongs to his nature! I have nothing to do with it;" a delightful instance of the dormant qualities which come out in elemental partnerships.

PRINCE HENRY ON LONG ENDURANCE TOUR

PRINCE HENRY OF PRUSSIA

Headed by Prince Henry of Prussia, thirty-seven German and twenty-eight English participants are on the annual Prince Henry automobile endurance tour.

The course for this year's tour starts at Homberg and follows a devious way through Germany to Hamburg. At that point the automobiles entered in the tour cross by ship to Southampton, England. There, under their own power, they again take the road, proceeding to Edinburgh and returning to London.

SHE PITIED NEW YORKERS.

If They Get in a Fight a Knife Is Used Where Western Men Use Fists.

(New York Letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star.)

One of the fruits of Mayor Gaynor's "clubless cop" policy may be experienced by the casual visitor to almost any one of the streets on the east side of Harlem. Gangs of ruffians have been running wild there, insulting women, beating and robbing men, blackmailing the little shopkeepers out of some portion of their scanty gains. The other day Captain Burns was set upon by a gang of nine young thugs. The big policeman drew his nightstick and charged them. "Hey, youse," said one alarmed ruffian. "Youse dassn't hit us wit' that stick, see? Thuh mayor'll break you."

But the mayor won't break Captain Burns or any other copper, now that Commissioner Waldo is in command of the force. Waldo doesn't intend to permit his men to be beaten up. The copper who is beaten nowadays must have a good excuse. Waldo is an ex-army officer, a man with two good right hands, and a practical appreciation of the fact that a policeman's job is to keep the peace. If he does it with a balestick. The beautiful theories of the rights of the individual with which Mayor Gaynor started in have given way before cold facts. One of the rights of the individual is to get a regulation two-inch gash over the eyebrow from the end of the rosewood if he tries to take a prisoner from a policeman. But until this is beaten into their heads the east side rowdies will continue to tackle the coppers at every chance.

The other day Policeman Vecchi, in charge of a prisoner, was set upon by a gang of men. One thousand Harlem citizens stood about and did not dare interfere until Miriam Irving, a girl from Wyoming, forced her way through the crowd, and, taking the policeman's whistle, blew a blast upon it that summoned aid. Only 22, of the pony class, and pretty as a red wagon, she had the sand that the New Yorkers lacked. "But I don't blame them," she said afterward. "New York men have no chance to develop manly qualities. They hang about street corners and parade on Broadway, and when they get into a fight use a knife because they lack muscle. One western man is worth a dozen New Yorkers. The poor little snips who were raised here are only worth pity."

WIRE WIZARD IS COMING

Mijarez, king of wire walkers, will make his first appearance in Fort Wayne on Friday, July 21, with Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows. He is one of the startling features of the big show and as an aerial performer a veritable wizard. He should not be thought of in connection with other performers who make their living by wire performance. He is vastly better. He is so far beyond others of his class that his act is something new.

Mijarez was the most talked of performer in Europe last winter. He toured through Germany, France and England and set everybody there to talking about his remarkable achievements. He dances and stands upon his head on a slender wire. He mimics the antics of a tipsy man so perfectly that the audience is convulsed with laughter. He plays the part of a club man coming home in the wan hours of morning on very uncertain legs. He wabbles and staggers and falls down. People expect to see him go tumbling down to the ground. But he does not leave the wire. Bottle in hand, collar awry and hat smashed, he wends his wabbling way from one end of the wire to the other. His act would be funny if done on the solid floor oof a stage, for it is an artistic bit of character work. Presented on a lofty wire, with no net beneath, the performance is a hundred fold more attractive.

Another sensational act is presented by the Bonesetti family from Italy. These clever acrobats are among the greatest performers of Europe and their act is a classic. There is also Albert Schuman's company of trained horses from the Circus Schuman of Germany. These horses enter the arena concealed in large barrels which are piled on a big brewery wagon. They are not discovered by the audience till they kick the heads out of the barrels and jump into the ring. Three new herds of telephoning elephants, a troupe of baby elephant actors, and Loyal's famous dog equestrian are other features, novel in the extreme.

Among the aerialists are the Alex troupe, the greatest double somersaulters and vaulters among the world's high-air artists; the illustrious Klarkonians, the Flying Wards, the Aerial Smiths and the great Delno troupe. Prominent equestrians are the Dutton family, Emma Stickney, Florence Harris, the Clark brothers, Lola Mitchel, Inez Bell, Cecile Fortune, Emma Donovan and the Crocker family of Gypsies.

To this great array of talent is added a complete menagerie with nearly all the elephants in America, one the smallest in captivity and another 214 years old. The forenoon parade is the most elaborate the Ringlings have ever presented.

A SNOW INDOORS.

It is quite possible to have a fall of snow within doors, says Harper's Weekly. Indeed, the thing has actually occured, and the cause was no other than that which produces a fall of snow in the open air—i. e., a subjection of moist atmosphere to a temperature cold enough to crystallize the drops of moisture that were formed. The event, which is of authentic record, occurred in Stockholm. On a very cold, clear night an evening party was in progress. Many persons were gathered in a single room, and it became so warm that several women complained of feeling ill. An attempt was made to raise a window, but the sashes had been frozen in their places, and it was impossible to move them. In these circumstances there was but one thing to do. It was necessary that air should be admitted, so a pane of glass was smashed. Immediately a cold current of air rushed in, and at the same instant flakes of snow were seen to fall to the floor in all parts of the room. The entrance of a frosty current into an atmosphere saturated with moisture had produced a snowfall indoors.

WOMAN STARTLES A CONGREGATION

In Bespangled White Costume She Takes Charge of the Service.

HUGS A POLICEMAN.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 10.—Asserting she was inspired, Mrs. Mary Price, 30 years old, appeared in the center aisle of the fashionable Holy Trinity church, Rittenhouse square, during the services yesterday and began to preach. She was robed in a cloak of white and gold with a headdress improvised from a handkerchief.

Rev. Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, the rector, was in the midst of a discourse when the woman appeared like an apparition. So startled was the large congregation that no one moved for several minutes.

In a highly pitched voice the woman began to talk of lost sheep. She said she had been sent to find the lost sheep and to denounce the wolves masquerading in sheep's clothing.

Up the aisle the woman stalked, her flowing gown and peculiar headgear adding to the startling picture. As she reached the first step leading to the altar the congregation gave another gasp of astonishment, for when she lifted the robe it was seen that her feet were clad in golden colored slippers.

Claims Policeman as Lost Sheep.

"I have been sent and will speak," she cried. "The lost sheep must be found."

As the woman continued her fiery harangue from the pulpit one of the ushers went for a policeman. When Patrolman Bunting arrived he went to her and told her she must leave the church.

"Behold, I have found my sheep," cried the woman, throwing her arms around the policeman's neck.

Her whole manner changed in an instant and she began to talk in a rambling way to Bunting, who, blushing, seized the opportunity to persuade her to leave the church.

As she went down the aisle the woman reached into one of the pews and gathered up the shoes tht she had discarded for her golden slippers. She left the congregation gasping.

The ushers say they saw the woman enter the church shortly before the service began, but paid little heed to her. Although one of the most fashionable churches in the country, all strangers are welcomed at Holy Trinity.

The woman was escorted to a pew, and that was the last any one saw of her until her dramatic outburst.

When taken to the Fifteenth and Locust streets police station she gave her name and address.

Dr. Gourney Williams at first was inclined to believe the woman was suffering from mental derangement, due to heat, but an investigation by the police showed that her "mission," as she described it, had been carefully planned.

She rigsistered at the Keystone a few weeks ago, and said she had just arrived from England.

Mrs. Price's costume, which was an elaborate affair, had been liberally bespangled. When she entered the church the cloak was concealed. She must have drawn it on some time during the service or the ushers would have noticed it.

Dr. Williams sent the woman to the Philadelphia hospital, where an investigation will be made as to her mental condition.

WILL PROBE FOR AN ICE COMBINE

Indianapolis Prosecutor is Suspicious That a Trust Exists.

GRAND JURY TO SEE

Indianapolis, Ind., July 10.—If there is an ice trust in Indianapolis Prosecutor Frank P. Baker proposes, he says, to have the Marion county grand jury bring it to light and indict those who are found to be connected with it for violating the Indiana anti-trust laws. Likewise, he announces he will have the grand jury investigate the question of whether there is a combine among the Indianapolis coal dealers. He says the two branches of business are so closely allied, since many dealers handle both commodities, that he believes the investigation should be a twin affair. The grand jury will probably be sworn in tomorrow. During the present hot weather the price of ice has been increased ten cents a hundred and there have been many rumors of an ice combine.

FAMINE MENACES CHICAGO.

Chicago, July 10.—The ice situation here is the most serious since 1868, it was announced today, and the price was raised 8½ to 10 cents per hundred weight to big users. The advance for family consumption, however, is only 5 cents.

It is said that economy will be necessary to make the supply last the season out, but that if it is wasted in the way that water is there will be practically no ice in the city within six weeks.

BADLY BITTEN BY DOGS.

Traveling Photographer Attacked by Vicious Brutes.

While soliciting business on Hugh street George Olney, a traveling photographer, was attacked bytwo bull dogs. One bit him through the lip and the other sank its teeth in his cheek, when witnesses succeeded in driving the animals away. The injured man was taken to a physician, who cauterized the wounds and no serious results are apprehended. Patrolman Nick Petgen was detailed on the case and he soon located the dogs. One of the Canines belonged to Charles Curry, residing on Hugh street. It was caught and shot. The other dog belongs to Daniel Findlay, residing on Hanna street. It was canght, but escaped while being led with a rope. As it started to run Patrolman Petgen shot and wounded it, but the animal escaped and the officer has not been able to locate it. The photographer makes a specialty of taking picttures of children on a donkey, which accompanies him about the streets.

EXONERATES HIS PLAYMATE.

Lima, O., July 10.—With the words, 'Art didn't do it on purpose, mama," upon his lips, Dewey Schockency, 13 years old, of Ada, O., died here today. The boy was shot Saturday by Arthur Parks, 15, a playmate, while playing Indian.

BALLOONIST FATALLY HURT.

Lima, O., July 10.—William Ascott, 55, Springfield, O., became entangled in telephone wires when he began a balloon flight here last night and fell thirty-five feet. He suffered injuries from which he cannot recover. The big silken bag, 65 feet in height, shot up and has not been recovered.

PASSENGER COACH DAMAGED BY FIRE

Flames in East Pennsylvania Yards Cause $300 Loss.

FIGHT WITH FLAMES

Fire, which broke out shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, in the east Pennsylvania railroad yards, partially destroyed a wooden vestibule passenger coach, and badly scorched the end of another coach. The damage to the first coach is estimated at about $3,000, and it has been removed to the shops for repairs, while the damage to the other coach is very slight. Both coaches were standing on the track with a number of others, and it was only the timely arrival of the fire department that kept the whole row from being burned and causing a much heavier loss than that sustained.

WIRE TRUST MEN IN COURT.

Thirty Appear, Plead Not Guilty and Give Bond.

New York, July 10.—The eighty-three wire manufacturers indicted June 29 under the anti-trust law on charges of restraining trade in wire products began their fight against the government today by entering pleas of not guilty and securing a delay until Sept. 1 to enable them to file demurrers. Each man's bail was fixed at $1,000.

Only thirty of those indicted made appearances in the United States circuit court today, but District Attorney Wise said he had received assurances that the attitude of all would be practically uniform, and that the rest would file formal pleas in a day or two and be included under the action of the court taken today. Neither Herbert L. Satterlee, J. P. Morgan's son-in-law, nor Frank J. Gould were present. Mr. Satterlee entered a plea through his attorney, but Mr. Gould was not represented.

THREE SLAIN IN AFFRAY.

Three Others Will Die as Result of Fight at a Christening.

Steubenville, Ohio, July 10.—Three men were slashed to death and three more aftally cut in a general fight at Adena early today. Two men are under arrestt. All concerned are Polish miners. The cutting took place during a christening and dance. The festivities ewre in progress all day Sunday and by midnight, it is stated, all of the party were intoxicated.

The men are said to have quarreled over a woman. At least ten others received slight wounds during the fight. Several women were hurt.

FEW CALLED FOR MAIL.

So well had the fact that Sunday closing of the postoffice was to be inaugurated in Fort Wayne yesterday, been advertised that only a very few persons call for their mail. There was little disappointment and no complaint over the elimination of the old-time custom.

The letter carrier force is somewhat shattered owing to the fact that seven o fthe regular men are off duty by reason of vacations and illness. One of them, Louis Lehmann, was taken ill on his route this morning and was compelle dto call for a substitute.

SCOTCH MASONS ARRIVE.

Members of Oldest Lodge in the World Visit America.

New York, July 10.—Three representatives of St. John's lodge, of Glasgow, Scotland, the oldest Masonic lodge in the world, arrived in New York yesterday. Worshipful Master James Strand, Past Master Andrew Brown and Junior Warden John W. Dempster compose the party. Mr. Brown brought with him the badge of his office, an exquisite gold chain. The central link of its forty golden shields and stars is the official seal of the lodge, the gift of Malcolm Canmore, king ofthe Scots in the year 1057. The chain is insured for $2,500, but is sentimental value is far above price.

The Scots will remain in America six weeks visiting different lodges.

GIRLS WERE PICKED UP.

Will Be Held Until the Sheriff Has Time to Investigate.

Two girls who gave half a dozen different names and finally settled on Ethel and Bertha Shoup as the true ones were picked up by Sheriff Rheichelderfer and Deputy Barney Schoenfeldt at New Haven today and will be taken into the city court on the charge of loitering tomorrow and held pending an investigation.

They arrived Saturday at noon and stayed at a hotel Saturday night. Last night they were on the streets and today the case was reported to the sheriff. They say they are two of nine children who started out some time ago with their parents from Brookville, Ind., and that they left the others at Maumee, O. The report to the effect that they had a big roll of money was found untrue as they were scantily clothed and had a little more than a dollar with them.

UNDER SURGEON'S KNIFE.

Fred E. Hoffman is a patient at Hope hospital, where on Sunday evening he submitted to an operation for appendicitis. The patient's condition is reported to be very satisfactory. Mr. Hoffman was taen ill on Friday, but it was not until Sunday afternoon that his condition seemed to be alarming.

DECORATORS ASK DELAY.

A telegram was received today by the county commissioners from William G. Andrews, of Clinton, Ia., saying he would be here tomorrow to finish the cleaning of the court house dome and retouching the paintings. This is the third promise of a similar kind and the commissioners are losing faith.

MURDERS HIS LITTLE CHILD.

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 10.—W. H. Allen killed his 2-year-old child with a shotgun today as it slept in its carriage on the porch and rather than be taken alive by the police he emptied the other barrel of the gun into his breast. He was taken to the city hospital dying.

HAD DEEP KNIFE WOUND.

A man by the name of O. P. Wisenwell, who was suffering from a bad knife wound in the abdomen, was brought to this city from Cecil, O., and removed to St. Jospeh's hospital Saturday afternoon. He is being attended by Dr. W. W. Barnett, and while the injury is a serious one the chance of his recovery was reported to be good this afternoon.

ELGIN BUTTER MARKET.

Elgin, Ill., July 10.—Butter was firm at 24c: output, 1,079,000 pounds.

HAD WRIST BROKEN.

Charles Eby, a motorman on the Robison Park line, had a wrist broken this afternoon, when a brake handle slipped and flew around, striking his arm.

IN UNIFORM OF GRAY.

Shrine Patrol With Its Band Leaves for Rochester.

Some sixty members of Mizpah temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, left at 9 o'clock Sunday evening in a special train over the Nickel Plate railroad for Rochester, N. Y., to attend the imperial council session. The delegation included the patrol and the band of the Shriners.

The patrol of thirty-two members was attired in a natty fatigue uniform of light gray suits with the word "Mizpah" over the left breast pocket of the coat; cardinal silk socks and necktles to match the fez, white silk shirts with collars to match, pencil curl straw hats and white canvas shoes. The uniform, save for the shoes, was supplied by the Patterson-Fletcher company and the Fort Wayne contingent made a showy appearance.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY.

Victoria, Texas, July 10.—George Gosnell, a levee contractor, was found dead yesterday on the Terrell ranch. There were four bullet wounds in the back of his neck. Gosnell had received $600 Saturday, but had deposited it in banks. Robbery and love is supposed to have been the motives of the killing. Authorities have arrested Mrs. Gosnell, Peter Miller and Howard Miller and are looking for a 19 year old boy named Eli Pointer.

JOCKEY IS MURDERED.

Memphis, Tenn., July 10.—Thomas Dolan, formerly a well known jockey, was shot and instantly killed early last evening by J. H. Hughes, a merchant and planter of Haynes, Ark., in the room occupied by Hughes in a local hotel, following a dispute over a valuable diamond stud Hughes says he fissed. Dolan was 26 years old.

They are good guessers at Hope, Kas., remarks Charles M. Harger. The Dispatch notes that a farmer missed a fine team and telephoned far and wide without locating the animals. "Gradually it was forced upon his mind that his horses had been stolen, and he finally notified the deputy sheriff of his loss and suspicions. He made an investigation and was convinced the horses had been stolen." Sure enough they were stolen.

Fred Gerke, a prominent farmer of Adams township, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Lutheran hospital Friday afternoon, and whose condition was reported to be serious, has passed the critical stage, and is considerably improved.

ENJOYED BIG PICNIC.

Farmers' Home Market Club Has Day at Orvis Grove.

Gathered for the day in the Orvis grove on the Goshen road northwest of the city, members of the Washington Township Home Market club, together with many of their friends, enjoyed a picnic program. There was a big picnic dinner and the Robinson Chapel band played for the occasion. Brief addresses were delivered by William Geake and Attorney E. V. Harris, and two Wallen teams enlivered the afternoon wth a base ball game in which the Blues defeated the Independents by a score of 9 to 7. It is estimated that between 600 and 700 people were present during the day.

BIG CROWD AT BARBECUE.

The barbecue at which an immense carcass of beef was served was the feature Sunday at the colored camp meeting held at the Driving park under the auspices of the American Negro Industrial Enterprise association and a big crowd was in attendance. Rev. J. P. Berne, of Cincinnati, president of the association, preached sermons both afternoon and evening.

FICTION BY THE BEST WRITERS

PEAT'S-PART

BY LUCY PRATT

COPYRIGHTED 1911

I HAVE already explained that Peaty is a littel boy about my age and he lives in a house that comes up back to back with our house. I have told too that he has a dog named Peat. So the only reason I should mension it again, is because before I can write any thing else, I am obliged to tell something that happened to them both this afternoon, and I don't want to confuze anybody.

The way it happened was this. It was Friday and all the children were coming out of school. They couldn't seem to wait to get out either, and as soon as they were all down the steps they began talking and hollering something as if evrybody was trying to get ahead of evrybody else.

The reason of it was, the exkursion down the river to Stillwater Pines tomorrow afternoon. Miss Purse and Miss Kenton are the ones that are getting it up, and it is going to be just for the children in there grades. There is going to be a regular exkursion boat for it, and that is the reason they were making so much more noise than usyual on the way out of school.

Well, as I came down the steps myself, I happened to see Peaty kind of standing by himself out there by the gait. Of course he wasn't talking because in the first place he was alone, and in the next place he isn't one of the kind to talk much unless he knows you real well. Peaty doesn't laugh or make much noise the way the others do, so very often either, so I didn't think it was anything espeshial when I saw him standing out by the gait all by himself. But as soon as I got out there I could see there was something the matter. So I spoke to him. I can't remember just what I said, but I know it was something about the exkursion to Stillwater Pines. I wanted to see what he would say.

He didn't answer right at first, and then when he did he only kind of mumbled.

I guess I ain't going, he said.

Why not? I asked him. I didn't know the real reason but I thought praps it might be his cloes. Peaty never seems to have any nice cloes to wear, not even for Sundays. They seem kind of shabby and old and they are apt to look too littel and shrunken on him besides. But I didn't believe he would mind telling, so I asked him again.

Why not? I said.

You have to pay for your ticket, don't you? Peaty answered, kind of mumbling again, I ain't got any money for any ticket.

I hadn't thought of that. You did have to pay for your ticket, but it was only fifteen cents. They had it cheap like that so evrybody could aford it.

Its only fifteen cents Peaty, I said, Couldn't your aunt give you that?

I don't believe she could, Peaty answered.

Lets go and ask her anyway, I said. I'll go with you Peaty I said.

Peaty didn't say anything, but I guess he was thinking about his aunt. She is most always real mean and cross with him, and I guess he was about sure she wouldn't let him go. But he looked up as much as to say, well he sposed we might try it, and we went right along tords home.

As I said before, Peaty lives in a house that comes up back to back with our house, so when we got to our house we crossed through our yard and crawled under our back hedge, and there was Peatys aunt right there hanging out some cloes.

I was kind of scaired when I saw her, because I remembered how mean and cross she most always was, and I could see from the way Peaty looked that he was werse scaired of her than I was. I could see he was really too scaired to ask, now that he was right there, so I saw I would have to do it anyway. And I began without even stopping to think.

Can Peaty go on the exkursion down the river tomorrow after noon? I said. He has to pay fifteen cents for it.

She had a cloes pin in her mouth and she was reaching up to the line, but she stopped and looked at us.

Whats this? she hollered, without taking out the cloes pin, Exkursion down what river! Does he think I've got money for exkursions? Well, I haven't and he ought to know it.

Its only fifteen cents, I said, but I was so scaired now I guess I didn't say it very loud.

Fifteen cents! she hollered, Well, I haven't ny fifteen cents to spend on exkursions!

Perhaps my Mother would give it to him, I said, but my voice didn't seem to make any noise wurth mensioning beside of hers.

Your Mother give it to him! she answered just as loud as ever. Well, we ain't beggers, thank you. And she looked at Peaty.

Your abel bodied, ain't you? she asked him.

I don't think she meant large by that, because Peaty looked very narrow and littel beside of her, but he nodded his head.

Well, go to work and urn fifteen cents if you want it then, she hollered. I'm sure I have to work for what I urn. I don't beg for it!

I didn't say anything more, but I got out of the yard as quick as I could, and then I looked and there was Peaty behind me.

He looked kind of pail and he didn't say anything.

Well, I guess you can urn it anyway Peaty, I said. You can urn it down to Brocks.

Brock was the name of the grocery store, and they sometimes paid boys for dilivering packidges after school.

Praps I could, Peaty answered.

That was all he said, and we both started off right down the street. Peaty didn't say anything then either. I guess he was thinking how many packidges would he have to diliver to get fifteen cents. But all of a sudden he turned round as if he heard something.

Hear comes Peat, he said.

I have told that Peat is his dog. The reason evrybody called him that, was he was named that way before Peaty had him and he wouldn't change it. Besides that he was so apt to go with Peaty evrywhere he went, that people would quite often laugh when they saw them and say, Hear comes Peaty and Peat.

Well, anybody could see just to look at him, that Peat had made up his mind to go down to Brocks with Peaty, and when he made up his mind to do anything, it was usyually the best way to let him do it. Because evrybody knew that Peat was very hard to change. And not only that, but it was his dispersition to most always want to do the very thing you told him not to. Peaty was the only one who could manidge him at tall.

Well, when he saw Peat coming now, he gave a look at him, and from Peatys expression it almost looked as if he saw troubble ahead. But all he said was,

Come along, Peat.

And Peat glansed up out of one eye, as much as to say he had made up his mind to that before, and then he gave his tail a flert and went running along right in front of us, as if he was the one that planned it all anyway.

But it was a real nice warm afternoon, and the sun came down through the elm trees so as to make a whole lot of littel small, kind of wiggley lights on the sidewalk, and next you knew, Peat seemed to change his mind about being in such a hurry, and began nozing around at the littel lights, and then following them off onto the grass, and then nozing around back onto the sidewalk again.

Peaty got kind of out of patiense with him pretty soon, espeshially when he began to noze so much that he was lagging way behind.

Well, come ahead, Peat! he hollered. If your coming, come ahead!

Just then I saw something that took my attension for a minute. It was a lady coming out of a gait just across the street, and she was all drest up as if she was going out to make some calls. Only the queer thing about it was, there was a real large angorrer cat following her right out the gait. That didn't look as if she was going out to make calls of course, but she stooped down and began stroking the cat, and I could hear just what she said.

Oh naughty naughty kitty, she said, in a tone of voice as much as to say she thought the cat was awful smart, Did you want to go calling too? No no, I'm afraid you couldn't go calling this time.

Of course I could see then just how it was. She had started out to make some calls, and her angorrer cat had followed her the very first place she went.

I don't know whether Peaty saw it or not, but I turned round and it was easy to see that Peat saw it, just as plane as anything. Not only that, but he stuck both his ears right up in the air, and gave a jump right into the road, and the next you knew that angorrer cat was racing back through the very gait where she had just come out, and Peat was racing after her. And the lady who was making calls, she gave kind of a scream, and then she seemed to turn and start right off after both of them.

Well, it was lucky but she didn't have to go very far either, because before she was half way across the yard, the cat went scrambling up a tree right there in front of her, and she stopped where she was. Peat stopped too, about at the foot of the tree.

When Peat did that I gave a look at Peaty and Peaty looked back at me. He didn't say anything, but from the expression of his face I could see that he saw troubble ahead now anyway.

The lady turned round then too. And she saw Peaty stop right there where he was and look up at the angorrer cat, hanging on there, way up in the tree.

Is this your dog? she asked him, with her voice kind of shaking, as if she was scaired and mad at the same time.

Peaty is really afraid of ladys. I don't know why, but I think it is because his aunt is the only one he knows very well, and praps he thinks they are all something like that. Well, anyway he is afraid, and yet of course he could see, with Peat under the tree thretening the angorrer cat, and the lady calling to him, it wasn't any time to show it, so he nodded his head.

The lady looked down at Peat something as if she was really scaired to death of him.

Well, can't you come here and get him away? she called to Peaty.

Peaty went right along across the road and looked in the gait, but he didn't say anything, and I ran over there to help him.

Come here Peat! I hollered

You see I am apt to forget in a time like that, about Peats dispersition, and the way when you want anything speshial, he is always sure to do just exackly the opposite. It seems queer for a dog to be like that, and yet as soon as I said, Come here Peat, why, he settled right down as much as to say he was going to stay there all night if he wanted to.

Well, Peaty gave me a look as much as to say that wasn't any way to do, and then he walked in the yard just a littel ways.

Go for him, Peat, he said real low, but the lady under the tree she heard it.

Wy you wickid, disgusting littel brute! she hollered, What are you trying to do here anyway, with your miserable dog! You get him away from here this minute; or I'll have you both arrested!

I don't think you can arrest dogs, at least I never heard of it, but I guess Peaty thought she really meant it. Anyway he looked rather pail, and as if he'd got to get Peat away from that tree, no matter what happened. So he went in just a littel farther.

Don't you move, Peat, he said in a kind of a whisper, as if he didn't care very much to have the lady hear it. Stay where you are, Peat.

Peat looked back at him a littel uneasy then, as much as to say, well, he wouldn't stay there if he didn't feel like it, and then he hitched off an inch or two from the tree.

I saw that I could really help Peaty then, if I was carefull what I did so I spoke myself.

Stay where you are Peat! Back there Peat! You'll get him yet Peat! I called right out to him.

The lady who oned the cat gave one look at me, and the werst of it was, as soon as she looked she knew who I was because she knows my Mother.

Wy Felix Blanchard! she said, and her voice seemed to be quite shakey she was so mad, I am ashamed of you, ashamed of you! To be abuzing a poor helpless animul like this!

She glansed up the tree, and then from me to Peaty.

And the company you are with! I think your Mother would feel disgraced Felix!

And I was so surprised when she recognized me like that, that I didn't give her any answer at tall, but just kind of stepped back a littel beside of Peaty. And she just looked right up again at her cat.

My poor abuzed Butie! she kind of berst out, its wickid, wickid, oh its shameful, isn't it! Never mind dear, don't you be frightened, I'll get you down, don't you be frightened!

Then she looked down at Peat.

Get out, you nasty thing, she said, giving him a kind of poke with her foot, but by this time Peat was settled down again as if he was going to stay for good.

So she looked at Peaty again, as if she was getting about desperit. But I guess Peaty thought if she was going to act that way, wy let her do it.

So we just stood there and didn't say anything to her at tall, and she stood there calling up all kinds of things to incouridge the cat, and the cat glansed down as much as to say she didn't see much incouridgment in it, and Peat he sat there at the foot of the tree as if he didn't care what happened anyway.

But the lady turned round once more.

Well, this is a pretty pridicament! she said. Can't I go out for a few afternoon calls without being held a prizoner under a neighbors tree in this rediculous fashion? Have I got to stay here all night?

"CAN PEATY GO ON THE EXKURSION DOWN THE RIVER TOMORROW AFTER NOON?"

Nobody answered her and she gave one more glanse at Peaty.

Will you get your dog away or not? she asked him.

He didn't answer her right off, but I could hear him swallow as if he was beginning to feel quite nervus about it.

Very well, she said, I shall go right in here and telefone for the poleece.

Peaty looked so nervus then, I thought praps it would stop her. But it didn't.

Wait just a moment, dear, she called up to the cat, I'm coming right back to you!

And she went straight in the house.

Peaty turned his head round very slow to make sure that she was gone, and then he turned it again and looked back at Peat, and from the expression of his face I could see that he was going to do it this time if he dyed for it.

Keep still Peat! he said in a kind of scaired whisper. Don't you move! Just keep still Peat!

Peat glansed down as if he hadn't intirely made up his mind whether he'd keep still or not, and Peaty backed off a littel tords the gait.

Don't you move anyway, Peat! he whispered a littel louder. Don't you move Peat!

And Peat glansed down again, and then he kind of edged off sevral inches from the tree.

Stop it Peat! And Peaty spoke right out loud that time and backed off just a littel more tords the gait. Stop it! Don't you dair Peat!

You see the queer thing about Peat is, he has never been really known to take a dair, and Peaty knew it. So.

Stop it, Peat! he said. Don't you dair, Peat!

And Peat he flattened himself right out on the ground, as much as to say it might be dangerous, but he would risk it anyway, and then he just slid himself along as much as a yard tords Peaty.

Well the unexpeckted thing was, just at that minute the poarch door opened and the lady who oned the cat walked right down the steps. But Peaty didn't see her. He was watching Peat too close. And she stopped right where she was as if she didn't intirely understand it anyway, and watched them both.

I tell you stop right where you are Peat! Peaty said, as if he meant it too. Don't you go and risk it Peat!

And Peat he flattened down more than ever, as if he could see the danger but he wasn't going to be any koward, and then he slid right along tords Peaty.

Peaty backed out of the gait then.

Don't you come through that gait anyway, Peat! he said in a very loud whisper that time. Don't you dair do anything like that Peat!

And Peat kept sliding along flatter than ever, because with his dispersition of course he couldn't take a dair.

Well, if the lady who oned the cat hadn't kept so still, of course she would have spoiled it, but she didn't, she never spoke a word till she saw Peat go sliding right out through the gait, and Peaty catch him by the collar.

Well thank goodness, she kind of berst out then. But she turned and glansed out at Peaty and Peat as if she didn't intirely understand it yet. Well thank Goodness, she said again, but of all unheard of methuds!

And she walked right across the yard.

Come down now you poor dear, she said very pleasently. And the werst part of the whole thing happened then.

Come down now, she said very pleasently again, but the cat never moved a bit, just looked down as much as to say she would if she could but she couldn't.

Wy come down, she said. Theres nothing to hurt you now, come down dear!

But the cat was so high up she couldn't even make the least move, so she just looked down again as much as to say, wy she would if she could but she couldn't.

Wy she can't get down! the lady hollered right out. Oh dear, Oh dear! Can't she get down? Wy she must get down! She'll starve up there! Oh dear, somebody must get her down. I'll reward anyone who'll get her down. I'll reward anyone handsomely on the spot who'll get her down! Be pasient dear! she called up as if she was just about discouridged anyway, Oh try to be pasient just a littel longer!

The cat looked down as much as to say she was kind of tired of that, and then the lady she went hurrying into the house again.

When she did that I started right out for Peaty. But he was gone and so was Peat. Well, I didn't think of anything more, but just went racing up the street. I could see them ahead there, Peat kind of flerting his tail and leading off, and Peaty walking on behind him. And I caught up

Come on back Peaty! I said, come on back! She's offered a reward if you can get the cat, I said, come on back anyway!

Peaty didn't say anything but just turned round and started right back on the run, with me and Peat beside him on the run too. He didn't say anything till we got back to the gait. Then we all stopped and he spoke.

I'll bet I could get it down, he said.

Go ahead, I said, and I took a hold of Peats collar to keep him out. Go ahead, I said.

I have told before that Peaty is small and light, but I didn't really ever suppose he could do what he did then. Because as you already know, that was a big high tree and the branches weren't so very low either. And yet Peaty he never stopped for any thing. He just ran across the yard, and he gave kind of a littel quick spring to get a start on, and the next you knew he was skwirming up that tree something as if he was a cat himself. And the lady who oned the real cat came out on the porch while it was happening. And she didn't say a word, but just stopped. There was someone else that stopped too. I haven't mensioned them before but it was two men she went in to send for just after she spoke about the reward. She must have thought they would be better than the Poleece after all. Carpenters or something like that I think they were, and they had a ladder with them. But as I said, they stopped too.

And Peaty went skwirming right up as if they weren't there at tall, right up higher and higher, till the lady on the porch kind of gave a littel gasp as if she was afraid, and nobody said a word.

It was one of the men with the ladder spoke first.

By George, that littel spiders got her, he said. And Peaty was bringing down the cat.

But the lady didn't speak even then. Not until Peaty was on the ground before her and really holding it out to her in his hands. Then she seemed to give another gasp.

Well, of all the performances, she said. Of all the performances.

The men kind of laughed and said they guess they weren't needed, and if there was any reward they seemed to be a littel late for it, and then they laughed again and looked at Peaty and went out.

And the lady glansed out at the gait where Peat and I were waiting and then she glansed down at Peaty.

Well, young man, she said after awhile, Will you be good enough to tell me your name? And I guess Peaty answered, but not very loud.

What is it? she said, I don't hear, and I don't know as it makes much difference. But I wish you would tell me this, if you don't mind. What is that strange animul out there that you call your dog, and why in Heavens name, when you want him to do one thing do you tell him to do another.

Peaty turned his head tords the gait and I could just hear him answer, but very low.

Its the only way you can manidge him, he said.

Manidge him! she repeated, something as if she was talking to herself. Well its the most original methud I ever happened to hear of, I'll say that. However, and she spoke up a littel louder. Will you be good enough to go out there now and tell him not to move. That would be the way to start him I suppose, and I should really like to go home with my cat.

Peaty looked at her a minute and then she seemed to remember something and opened her purse.

Oh yes, she said, I always live up to my promises. I live up to my promises if I don't do anything else.

And what do you suppose? She pulled out a new five dollar bill and handed it to Peaty. His lips moved as if he was saying thank you, and he turned to come out the gait. He looked down at the five dollar bill as he came along and I don't know what he was thinking, but his face looked something as if it was full of a whole lot of little scaired smiles.

Perhaps he was thinking he hadn't ever seen quite such a lot of money before, or perhaps he was thinking about the exkursion down to Stillwater Pines. I don't know but I'm pretty sure the exkursion had something to do with it because with all the littel scaired smiles on his face just the same, he put the money in his pocket and walked out through the gate.

I guess I can go, he said, kind of swallowing at the same time. I didn't know but Peaty was really going to cry where's Peat? he said.

But Peat was already quite a ways ahead.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., July 10.—Generous rains and a prospect of cool weather resulted today in sending the wheat market to a much lower level. Cables, too, were bearish. Liverpool sent word of a disposition to realize, pending the issuance of the United States government crop report. Trade was active with private wire houses all selling. Opening figures were ⅞c to 1 c down. September started at 90 to 90⅝c, a loss of ⅝c to 1⅛c, and steadied around 90⅝c.

General commission and speculative selling made the corn market heavy. The Ohio state report helped materially to discourage the bulls. September opened 1c to 1⅛c off at 64¾@64¾c, and later held near 64½c.

Oats sympathized with the weakness of other grain but had considerable support from local scalpers. September started ⅜c to ⅝c easier at 45⅝c to 45⅞c and receded to 45½c.

Provisions sagged because demand was only scattered and hogs on the down grade. First sales varied from 5c lower to 10c advance, with September delivery $15.70 for pork, $8.37½ to $8.40 for lard, and $8.15 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, July 10.—A general improvement in stocks resulted in the opening transactions today. Buying was brisk and prices were quickly elevated to the level established in London before the opening here. Canadian Pacific's gain was 2¾. Union Pacific advanced 1¼. Atchison and Southern Pacific a point. Northern Pacific, Erie first preferred ⅝ and St. Paul, Reading, United States Steel and Erie common ⅜. Western Maryland was weak, declining a point on the first transaction.

Reports of better weather conditions in the crop regions, which were borne out by a fall in grain prices, caused a strong and active stock market. Representative railroad stocks were up between 1 and 2 points, with the Harrimans and St. Paul leading.

General improvement in the stock market resulted from reports of better crop conditions, received over the week end. Gains made on the London exchange by Americans before the opening here were increased in the early transactions in this market which presented a strong tone throughout the morning. Much buying was in anticipation of a favorable crop report today. Toward noon the market became less active and traders awaited the crop report and announcement of the monthly figures from the steel and copper industries before engaging in operations. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which remained stationary on Saturday, notwithstanding the publication of an exceptionally unfavorable annual report, became weak today, losing over a point. Lackawanna jumped 18 points, more than making up Saturday's loss. Bonds were firm.

Although the copper producers report was gratifying in every way, showing a large curtailment in production and an increased foreign demand, it failed to stimulate interest in the market, which was excessively dull. Traders generally preferred to wait for the government crop report before taking any definite stand on the market.

BOSTON POLICE TO SWAT FLIES

Men of the City's Finest Are Ordered to Join the Crusade.

WOMEN ASKING HELP

Boston, Mass., July 10.—Boston citizens were warned yesterday that if they see one of the city's "finest" waving his arms in the air and making a wild swing at space they should not yell for an alienist. The policeman is not crazy with heat; he is just following out the orders issued by the health department to help kill all the flies in our fair city.

Every member of the department is now a "fly cop," and there are almost 1,500 of them.

The Women's Municipal league of Boston has made the request for assistance in killing off the pests. The league has issued circulars, one of which has been placed in every police station in the city.

Gives Reasons for Crusade.

The circular gives a number of reasons for the destruction of the flies. One is that "one fly in one summer can produce normally 195,312,500,000,000,000 descendants." Somebody had a fine job computing the offspring from that one aforesaid fly.

As some flies are larger than others, and horseflies are common, a policeman would only be following out the mandates of his superiors if he used his club in killing them off.

Fly on Man's Head; Swat.

The fly is to be killed, no matter where he is. It is possible that a fly may light on a man's head. The officer in swatting, of course, only will try to end that fly's existence, saving the head of the man so far as is consistent with his duty.

The policemen were somewhat taken back when the orders were first issued, and some were unwilling to believe that they were engaged in any such work. The vast amount of good that they could accomplish was made plain to them, and they have entered into the spirit of it with destructive zest.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Denny Hays is new trackmaster in the Wabash yards.

The Fort Wayne Natural Gas, Oil and Mining company held a meeting at the New Old National bank parlors this afternoon to award the contract to sink a gas well and pick suitable territory.

H. G. Wagner has been chosen chief marshal of the parade next Sunday on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of St. Mary's Catholic church. The assistants are M. Baltes, Henry Monning, Henry Hoevel, A. Kalbacher, P. S. O'Rourke, B. Rengert, John Wessel, Jr., and B. Bueter.

The city board of equalization has raised the valuation of the First National bank stock from 105 to 125; that of the Old National from 105 to 120, and that of the Hamilton bank from 130 to 175. The Fort Wayne Jenney Electric Light company's assessment was raised from $15,000 to $50,000; the telephone plant from $3,000 to $15,000 and the Western Union Telegraph company from $3.00 to $15,000.

Hon. William Fleming has just returned from Kansas City, where he went as the representative of the Fort Wayne Land company, a syndicate recently organized by Samuel E. Morse, of the Chicago Times, to buy sixty acres of land on Independence avenue, immediately east of the limits of Kansas City. It includes Hon. William Fleming, Barney O'Connor, E. F. Carry and Hon. R. C. Bell, of this city; James Lillie, of Kankakee, Ill.; S. E. Morse, of Chicago, and several Kansas City gentlemen, including Capt. Isaac d'Isay and E. L. Cothrel.

The school trustees have three plats of ground for new school buildings to submit to the council. One commodious building will be placed at the southeast corner of Creighton and Holton avenues in the Seventh ward. The price of this ground will be $1,000. Two thousand dollars will be paid for lots on which to build school buildings at the southwest corner of Miner and DeWald streets, and an additional building will be erected at the southeast corner of Fry and Boone streets in Nebraska. The schools will be one-story bricks and will be completed before October 1.

CAR TURNS TURTLE.

Huntington, Ind., July 10.—Endeavoring to pass a rig going the same way, the Scott automobile driven by Tracy Scott ran into a ditch along the roadside and turned turtle Saturday afternoon at 2:30 on the Sutton hill. The machine was filled with traveling men en route to Warren, but the entire bunch escaped with only a few minor bruises.

NO RACE SUICIDE.

Bluffton, Ind., July 10.—County Health Commissioner A. W. Brown, of this city, has filed his report for June showing among other items that there were in the county 28 marriages, 16 deaths and 51 births. The majority in favor of births over deaths is very encouraging to those who are anxious about the race suicide question.

I have high-class investments in Local Bonds and Local Stocks. C. F. Pfeiffer, Shoaff Bldg.

SOME BIG ONION DAYS.

Events to Be Held at Collins and Wolf Lake.

As an onion man C. M. Wiener, of this city, the head of the produce firm of Wiener & Co., enjoys a double distinction. He is the secretary of the National Onion Growers' association and president of the Collins Onion association. Collins is one of the centers of the onion growing district in Indiana and at that place the firm of Wiener & Co. have a large onion store house, as they also have at Kimmel in that territory.

Mr. Wiener has been up through this territory during the last week and reports that the onion crop this year, despite the damage done by the unfavorable weather conditions, is going to be a pretty good one. All through that part of the country between Collins and Wolf Lake farmers have out large acreages of onions and the crop is valuable, yielding large revenues.

During the next several weeks "Onion day" will be observed in different localities in this great onion belt. On July 18 the meeting of the National Onion association will be held at Lake Wawasee and on August 22 and 24 great onion picnics will be held at Collins and Wolf Lake. The event at Collins, particularly, will be interesting. There will be a great dinner served and amusements of various kinds will be held. Prizes will be given to the farmers raising the best onions.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Notice is hereby given to the stockholders of the Teutonic Building, Loan and Savings association that the annual meeting of said association will be held on Tuesday, the 18th of July, 1911, at 8 p. m. in the court house assembly room, entrance on Berry street, for the purpose of electing officers to serve for the ensuing year and such other business as may come before the meeting.

Highland Dresses--Special 98c

No other garment is so comfortable, so little restricting to the freedom of small limbs, than these pretty Highland bloomer dresses.

They're more durable as to wear than any other dress you've seen—and they're ironed in a jiffy because they may be laid perfectly flat on the ironing board. Designed by a woman—that's the reason!

All Highland boomer dresses in stock went on special sale today—values up to $2.50, for

$10 SKIRTS FOR $5.95

PLACED ON SPECIAL SALE TODAY

The first thing a woman will think of when she sees these smart new skirts is their splendid practicability and all 'round service. The material, excellent tailoring and thorough good styles all guarantee that.

They're made of tiny black and white check material, suggestive of the favorite "salt and pepper" mixture which wears as well and never shows soil. Being just new, they're of the latest style—wide circular front, with flat panel back—fitting and hanging perfectly. A smart tailor finish is given by the side placket, which fastens with six smart buttons. These skirts are ideal for traveling and vacation wear—and an excellent garment for the business woman.

These skirts are regular $10 values, but are placed on Special Sale to-day at
